Republicans Can Hold Up Labor Action, Thomas Says

Head of Committee Cautions That Foes May Delay Reporting Of Repeal Measure

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Republicans will control the speed with which the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee can report out a measure to repeal the Taft-Hartley Labor Law, Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), committee chairman, said yesterday.

Thomas announced that he expects the committee to finish open hearings by Wednesday, but cautioned that in executive session Republican members can argue at length for a multitude of amendments they seek to tack on the Taft-Hartley repealer.

Republican committee members, led by Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, forced a ten-day extension of public hearings when they insisted on intensive examination of witnesses appearing for and against repeal of the labor law.

Pressure Increased

Repeal of the act continued to hold the congressional spotlight this week as both administration leaders and labor organizations increased the tempo of their demands for speedy action.

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, charged that Senator Taft, co-sponsor of the labor law, had made "retreats and concessions" on 18 sections of the act.

He asserted that the Senator's actions at the labor committee's hearings add up to a "reluctant confession" that the law "is unworkable and foreign to sound labor relations."

Ghost of Eightieth Congress

Murray described Senator Thomas' bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley law and reinstate the Wagner Act with Administration-sponsored amendments as the "keystone of the entire program of the Administration." In a letter to Thomas he asserted that if the measure fails "or is saddled with crippling amendments it will bring home to millions of Americans that the ghost of the Eightieth Congress still rules the Eighty-first."

The CIO leader listed "repudiations" of the labor law's provisions at committee hearings by Senator Taft as follows:

Sections permitting strikebreakers to vote in National Labor Relation Board elections, while barring strikers from the same right; considering all labor boycotts as unjustifiable; calling for mandatory injunctions against labor, but not against employers; prohibiting the closed shop, and providing excessive penalties for unions and their members in case of technical violation of the notice of contract changes.

Also, banning political expenditures by unions; setting up certain rules for handling of welfare funds; placing an "enormous con-

Safari Exhausts His Life Savings, But He Gets a Steak

Meadville, Pa., Feb. 20 (AP).—Ayres H. Peterson was back on the job selling lightning rods today—his month-long hunting trip to Africa just a memory.

For many years the lightning rod salesman dreamed of going to Africa. It took a lot of money but he managed to save a little bit each year.

Finally he accumulated $5000 for the trip. He bagged 35 animals including an elephant, a giraffe and two buffaloes. But as for meat, he'd rather eat the American variety.

"The first good meat I had since I left was the beefsteak dinner which was my first meal at home," he said.

Protest to Peru

Revolution Plot Nipped, Bolivia Says

La Paz, Bolivia, Feb. 20 (AP).—President Enrique Hertzog's government announced today it has squelched a revolutionary plot engineered by Bolivian exiles in Peru and Argentina.

At least 12 leaders of the rightist National Revolutionary Movement have been arrested. Government sources said many more were being rounded up. Bolivia demanded that Peru halt the activities of the plotters.

Hertzog said he was preparing to order a precautionary "state of siege." He blamed the plot on backers of the late President Gualberto Villarroel, the Bolivian "strong man" who was assassinated in a revolution in July, 1946.

An Interior Ministry communique gave this account of the frustrated plot:

The uprising was scheduled to begin this morning with the cutting off of electric and water utilities in La Paz, Bolivian capital 12,000 feet up in the Andes, and other cities.

Unemployed miners, equipped with dynamite, had been stationed in La Paz and other areas. They were to receive arms and ammunition.

Israel, Egypt Reported Near Peace Terms

Beersheba Dispute Said to Be Only Thing In Way of Armistice

Rhodes, Feb. 20 (AP).—Israeli and Egyptian delegates were said tonight to have accepted in principle a draft armistice agreement, except for one controversial point.

That point involves Beersheba and is being referred to Cairo. It was understood the Egyptian delegates regarded the draft prepared by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator, as satisfactory but wanted Cairo to assume final responsibility.

The Jews said the agreement will meet with their approval with little or no change. It was generally agreed that the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations have ended.

(In Tel Aviv, it was reported that the Israeli cabinet had accepted the draft. Unofficially, it was said the armistice provides for a withdrawal of the main military forces of the Israelis and Egyptians only in the western Negev—the Jewish-Egyptian frontier area.)

Subject Exhausted, Israelis Say

The only thing remaining is the formal signing of the agreement or an announcement of failure if Cairo rejects the point still in controversy. Israeli sources said there would be no more discussions because all subject-matter has been exhausted.

Beersheba, generally considered the mother city of the Arab race, was occupied by Israeli forces last October. The southern Palestine city is outside Israel's territorial limits as provided by the U. N. partition plan of 1947. It is a strategic point on roads running north to Jerusalem, west to Gaza, south to Egypt and Saudi Arabia and east to Trans-Jordan.

The armistice formula was drafted last night. Bunche read the 4000-word document at a formal session of the Israeli and Egyptian delegates this afternoon. Details have not been divulged. Earlier discussions have dealt with proposals to demilitarize Beersheba.

Talks On Since January 13

Egyptian-Israeli talks have been in progress here since January 13.

An Amman dispatch said a Trans-Jordan delegation will leave for Rhodes soon to begin armistice talks with the Israelis. Trans-Jordan has formally accepted Bunche's invitation to come to Rhodes.

Taft Favors Atlantic Pact With 'Force'

Supports Extension Of Hemispheric Defense Principle To Western Europe

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

On the eve of final negotiations for a North Atlantic Security Pact, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday threw his weight on the side of such an agreement.

A Republican leader in Congress and presidential aspirant, Taft often has been a bitter and outspoken opponent of Administration foreign policy. During debate last year on the Marshall Plan, he endeavored to cut $1,300,000,000 from the appropriation as "a program completely without economic justification." He did say at that time, however, that he thought the Marshall Plan "justified by the world battle against communism."

Taft said yesterday he could go along with a North Atlantic treaty similar to the Western Hemisphere Defense Pact of 1947, which assumes that an attack on one American nation is an attack on all of them. He added that extension of that idea to Western Europe "has been my idea right along."

Sees No Objection to "Force"

Much of the confusion over the proposed Atlantic Pact, Taft said, resulted from failure of some Europeans to understand that this Nation cannot be committed to war without a congressional declaration. He saw no constitutional objection, however, to including in a treaty language which would commit the United States to consider "force" as one means of carrying out its obligation to aid against aggression.

Taft's statement followed by a few hours publication of a poll by The Washington Post which showed that of 51 Senators who would express an opinion, 50 said they would vote for a war resolution in case of an attack on one of the pact countries. Thirty-seven Senators expressed no opinion and eight could not be reached.

While Secretary of State Dean Acheson prepared to begin final talks with ambassadors of six prospective signatory nations, diplomats here expressed the belief that Norway might soon come into the negotiations. That country, which has been warned by Russia against joining the defense treaty, will be extended an invitation as soon as its Parliament approves membership. The dominant Norwegian Labor Party indorsed the pact at a special meeting Saturday.

Arguments Set Forth

Even as the Atlantic Pact moved toward preliminary agreement, the Foreign Policy Association issued a report which set forth arguments both for and against the agreement. The report was prepared by Vera Micheles Deap, director of research, and Blair Bolles, Washington Bureau director.

The report pointed out that European nations desired some assurance that the United States would "automatically" go to their aid in case of attack, since they feared antagonizing Russia if they

Falling Wall Kills At Least 360 in Island Food Line

Lisbon, Portugal (Monday), Feb. 21 (AP).—Several hundred persons, lined up for a government food handout, were crushed to death when a wall fell on them at Praia, capital of the Cape Verde Islands, dispatches from there said today.

The reports said 360 bodies have already been found under the collapsed wall and rescue work is continuing.

A serious famine has made it necessary for the government to provide wide-scale food relief service.

Pound, Prize-Winning Poet, Denies Betraying Anyone

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

"I have not betrayed anyone," Ezra Pound, prize-winning poet, said yesterday at St. Elizabeths Hospital where he became a mental patient after being charged with treason.

The statement was made in response to a request for comment on winning the $1000 first annual Bollingen Prize in Poetry for the best book of poetry published in 1948. He ignored questions about the award, his mind apparently fixed on the treason charge.

Maintaining his policy of not seeing newspapermen, Pound's only other comment was that "inaccurate statements in press (were) very tiring."

His remarks were scrawled in a bold hand on the margin of a sheet of paper containing questions about the award and his present literary work.

Pound's denial of guilt of the Federal Government's charge that he broadcast Axis propaganda attacks against the Allies over the Fascist Rome radio during World War II, was consistent with his statement to the press when he was brought from Italy to Washington November 18, 1945.

At that time he sarcastically told reporters, "There is an idea afloat here that I betrayed this country. If that damned fool idea is still in anybody's head I want to wipe it out."

A few minutes later the 63-year-old Idaho-born poet added, "What I want to know is whether any-

India Girds For Trouble With Sikhs

Militant Religious Leader Jailed, Protest Demonstration Set

New Delhi, Feb. 20 (AP).—India's fierce warrior nation of Sikhs, six million strong, showed signs today of going on the warpath again.

The Indian government clamped one of its major chieftains into jail, and took elaborate precautions against disturbances. The Sikhs had a big hand in the bloody rioting of 1947 which cost an estimated half million lives.

In jail is the fiery politician and religious leader, Master Tara Singh. He heads a militant Sikh organization known as Akali Dal, which demands a separate homeland for the Sikh nation.

About 5000 Akali Dal members, congregating in their places of worship, voted today to call a country-wide protest demonstration on March 2 against his arrest. The city was reported quiet today. The Sikh religion requires its men to carry knives. Akali Dal members carry swords a yard long. They are bearded, and proud of their strength and fighting ability.

The Akali Dal's objective is a separate state in the east Punjab section. The area is inhabited by some 6 million Sikhs and 14 million Hindus.

Tara Singh came to Delhi yesterday to address a meeting of his militant followers, in defiance of government orders. The police arrested him and later tear-gassed a group of Akalis who tried to march through the streets.

By day's end 9 other members also were in jail, the police said. The arrest of 22 others was announced today.

The Sikh unrest seems to have approached a climax at a time when the government has started a wide-scale roundup of Communists it accused of trying to foment a strike of one million railway employes. Scores were arrested yesterday in simultaneous police actions throughout the county. Communist influence among Sikhs, however, is negligible.

Zulus, Indians Renew Riots In South Africa

2d Night of Fighting Starts After Native Is Wounded in Leg

Durban, South Africa, Feb. 20 (AP).—More than 1000 native Zulus swept across Queen's Bridge tonight and attacked every Indian in sight.

The attack started after one native had been shot in the leg from an Indian automobile.

It was the second successive night of clashes between Zulu natives and Indians.

Durban had been quiet since riots between Indians and natives were quelled a month ago. Scores were slain in clashes at that time. Police with rifles still patrol districts in the city.

Durban's Indian population is 110,000, immigrants and descendants of immigrants from the Asian subcontinent. They have long constituted a minority problem which has been brought before the United Nations by India.

An Indian bus was stoned and set on fire tonight for the second night in succession, after the driver had been removed and attacked with knives. Several Indians were injured.

Every automobile driven by Indians that approached the riot area was pelted with stones and bricks.

Saturday night's rioting was touched off when a native woman was run down by an Indian-owned bus.

Three hundred infuriated natives set fire to the bus after attacking the Indian occupants in the vehicle. Later another Indian bus was stoned by natives.

Earlier in the day there had been an exchange of blows between native and Indian boys at the non-European market.

Navy to Test New Arms in War Games

By the United Press

The Navy yesterday announced the start of the biggest peacetime war maneuvers in history, featuring for the first time the use of a simulated atom bomb attack. Simulated guided missiles also will be used.

The games, to take place in the Caribbean, will involve 120 ships, several hundred planes and 35,000 men from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and the Canadian army.

Major warships, including the huge new aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt and the battleship Missouri, were to leave from East Coast ports today to begin the exercises which will open tomorrow and last until March 19.

Subs to Take Part

The Missouri, the Roosevelt and escorting vessels were to sail from the big operating base at Norfolk, Va. They will be joined at sea by other vessels moving out from the air station at Quonset Point, R. I. A fleet of submarines, including six guppy snorkel type, will head to sea from the base at New London, Conn.

The major "operation" will be an assault on Vieques island, off Puerto Rico. It will be assumed to be a part of the "African-Eurasian land mass, an 'enemy' area heavily fortified and held by a substantial number of troops."

The maneuvers will provide a chance to test the latest antisubmarine devices, as well as the effectiveness of Navy jet fighter

83-Car Freight Wrecks, Tears Up Track in Carolina

Southern Pines, N. C., Feb. 20 (AP).—A freight train bearing 83 cars of fruit and vegetables from Florida to New York wrecked 8 miles north of here at daybreak today. No one was injured.

About 800 feet of the trunk line of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad were torn up and New York-Florida passenger and freight traffic was rerouted.

A number of cars pyramided into a huge pile of debris.

The fruits and vegetables, particularly desirable now on the Eastern markets because of the crop damage in California, were strewn about the wreck scene.

Jurists Offer Alibi to Clear Mindszenty

Assert Cardinal Was In Ottawa Day of 'Secret Agreement'

Cardinal Mindszenty was in Ottawa on the day when his Communist accusers said he was near Chicago making a secret agreement with Otto von Hapsburg, according to a statement issued here yesterday.

The statement was made in a protest by 14 Washington jurists and deans of law schools denouncing the so-called "trial" of Cardinal Mindszenty in Hungary as a "brazen attempt by the Communist Party to prostitute the judicial process."

Signers of the statement included: Thurman Arnold, former United States Court of Appeals judge; Brendan F. Brown, head of Catholic University school of law; Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, retired, former judge advocate general of the Army and United States member of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East; and Joseph B. Keenan, former United States chief counsel in prosecuting Japanese war criminals.

The secret agreement charge was one of four in the Communist trial against the cardinal assailed by the group.

The cardinal was accused of having met Otto on June 21, 1947, in a monastery near Chicago, and of having there made the agreement whereby, "after the third world war, which was expected soon, the United States would support a Federated Central European Kingdom."

Seen by Thousands

Actually, he was seen by thousands on that day in Ottawa, where he attended the Marian Congress, the lawyers' protest pointed out. That evening, the cardinal had dinner with a number of Canadian dignitaries, including Mr. St. Laurent, now Prime Minister, according to the local jurists.

In citing the charges and their refutations, the lawyers declared the "unjust purpose" of the trial was to fasten guilt on the cardinal, gain totalitarian domination in Hungary, destroy religious freedom and influence, and to discredit the United States.

Pointing out that protests had been made throughout the world against the religious and political injustice of the "simulated judicial proceeding," they restricted their

Executive Board Overruled

Philadelphia's Transit Strike Ended by Rank and File Vote

Philadelphia, Feb. 20 (AP).—Rank and file CIO unionists today ended Philadelphia's paralyzing 10-day transit strike at a stormy mass rally—shouting down no-peace votes of their own executive board.

The transport workers howled acceptance of an 8-cent-an-hour fourth round wage increase for the 11,000 trolley, bus and subway operators in the Nation's third city.

They walked off their jobs at midnight February 10, demanding a 25-cent hourly pay boost. Philadelphia Transportation Co. offered 2 cents. Workers averaged $1.35.

The first subway train started rolling today at 5:30 p. m., two hours after the strike ended. Streetcars and buses began moving immediately after that.

PTC and union negotiators agreed last night to settle the strike for 8 cents and 10 changes in working conditions. A hurriedly called rally of strikers rebelled, breaking up in wild confusion without a decision.

Ten hours later the local TWU executive board rejected the agreement 23-9 and directed that the strike go on. Another town hall rally of more than 3000 strikers got under way quickly.

The rally at first ordered a secret ballot on ratification. Then International TWU President Michael J. Quill took over in his bristling Irish brogue.

Quill's impassioned plea for immediate return to work brought the strikers storming to their feet with shouts of approval. There the strike officially ended. Only 25 voted to continue the walkout.

The proposed contract wasn't what union leaders wanted—and they said so.

"I don't like this contract," Quill shouted, "But sometimes you have to take half a loaf or less to make an advance."

"Employers all over America are claiming the cost of living is toppling. I say we should grab every cent we can get now because we may not be able to get anything later under the present trend."

"Go back to work," Quill begged, "go back today. Don't split the union down the middle. That's what the company wants."

The new contract provides no change in the split run setup.

All in all, the union has gained 48 cents in increases over the last four years. Meanwhile, PTC has boosted rates from 7½ to 10 cents on trolleys and from 10 to 12½ on buses.

Chastised Russian Composer Coming to Conference in U. S.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Dmitri Shostakovich, one of Russia's greatest living composers, will visit this country for the first time in March, Dr. Harlow Shapley, chairman of the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, announced today.

Shostakovich

Dr. Shapley said Soviet Ambassador Alexandre S. Panyushkin had informed him that the Russian composer would be delighted to attend the council's Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace here, on March 25, 26 and 27.

Official Soviet permission for Shostakovich to attend the conference indicates he has regained favor with the Central Committee of the Communist Party, which has chastised him several times in recent years because his works "smell strongly of the spirit of the modern bourgeois music of Europe and America."

Shostakovich, composer of nine symphonies played around the world, twice publicly apologized to the Congress of Soviet Composers for the "bourgeois formalism" in his works and said he knew how to make the proper corrections in his future music.

The Council also announced that four other Russians would attend the conference.

250,000 Cheer Pope As He Likens Cardinal Mindszenty To Early Martyrs

(Text on Page 11)

By Norman Montellier

Vatican City, Feb. 20 (U.P.). Pope Pius XII told a vast, cheering throng in St. Peter's Square today that totalitarian states will never silence the Roman Catholic Church.

Sunlight glinted off a golden cross overhead as the Pope, speaking in a voice vibrant with emotion, likened Josef Cardinal Mindszenty to the early Christian martyrs.

He denounced the life imprisonment imposed upon the Hungarian Cardinal, and said it had "awakened on the banks of the Tiber a shout of indignation" against the "sentence inflicted . . . on the banks of the Danube."

He spoke for 11 minutes.

Interrupted again and again by prolonged shouts of acclamation from the overflow crowd of 250,000 to 300,000 persons, the Pontiff said the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty was but one link "in the long chain of persecution" directed by dictators against Christianity.

Church Will Never Waver

The Church, he said, is eternal and will never waver or hesitate. He called on God to give the people vigilance and strength against future blows.

"Who does not remember the first Roman martyrs . . ." asked the Pope, "sacrificed under Nero . . . The modern persecutors show that they are docile disciples of that inglorious school.

"They copy, so to speak, their masters and models although they do not surpass them in crudeness, able as they are in the art of using the most advanced progress of science and technology with the scope of a domination and enslavement of the people such as would not have been conceivable in the past."

In white vestments and purple robe, the Pope spoke from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica to peasants, priests and prominent persons rallied by Catholic Action groups of the Roman Diocese to demonstrate solidarity in face of Communist assaults on the church.

He spoke with uncommon deliberation. His words came slowly and were enunciated clearly when he said:

"The church does not meddle in purely political and economic questions nor does she care to dispute the utility or harmfulness of one or the other forms of government.

"She is ever anxious to the extent that is in her power to have peace with all. She renders unto Caesar that which is his by right, but she can not betray or abandon that which belongs to God."

He said that "the Church of Christ follows the path traced for her by the Divine Redeemer. She

300 Riot in Berlin At Movie Showing Of 'Oliver Twist'

Berlin, Feb. 20 (NYHT).—Three hundred displaced persons and Germans rioted today against the showing here of the British movie "Oliver Twist" which the crowd condemned as antisemitic because of its portraiture of Fagin as a money-stealer and exploiter of children.

When the showing opened, the demonstrators began hurling stones at the screen. Several demolished stools and ripped down curtains.

Non-Jewish Germans also protested the picture, according to the theater manager. German reaction was probably in part stimulated by the caustic editorial in the American-licensed newspaper Tagesspiegel, which denounced it as antisemitism.

France Reports Discovery of Rich Uranium Deposits

Paris, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Uranium deposits, possibly the richest in the world, have been discovered in southern France, the French Press Agency reported today.

The deposits were found in the mountains about 12 miles north of Limoges.

The news agency said tests proved deposits of the ore, vital in atomic bombs, are the richest known to exist anywhere.

Executive Vice Chairman Boyle Was Man Behind Democrats' 'Whistle Stop' Strategy

Political strategists often are men who work far behind the ballot front, and remain unknown to the general public while the campaign uproar is on.

William M. (Bill) Boyle, jr., was such a figure in the 1948 campaign. His story—the part he played in the great upset—is only now coming out as a result of his appointment as executive vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Boyle's watchtower in the campaign was voteless Washington; specifically, Democratic national headquarters in the Ring building. His job, like that of any strategist, was first of all to gather political intelligence. Having done this, he advised President Truman on where and how to smash the Republican foe.

Planned Whistle Stops

It was Boyle who suggested most of the "whistle stops" where Mr. Truman made his rear-platform speeches, and where almost certainly he won the election.

Sometimes Boyle had to fight to get his strategy adopted, as, for example, in the case of Ohio and Illinois. He was convinced, as a result of intelligence coming in from those two States, that Mr. Truman had a good chance to carry them. He therefore recommended that the President spend extra time in them and concentrate on the small towns.

Some of the President's advisers thought he might more profitably spend his time elsewhere, but Boyle's suggestion finally was adopted. When the votes were counted, it was found that Mr. Truman had carried Illinois by 35,612 and Ohio by 7107—margins that may well have been due to those extra whistle-stop speeches in the two States.

Boyle did most of his work here over the long-distance telephone, calling up Democratic leaders in States toward which the Truman Special was headed. He transmitted his information to the train in the same way. Every night, during a stop, White House Secretary Matthew J. Connelly would call Boyle to find out what the latter had learned from State leaders about political sentiment—about places that ought to be visited and issues that ought to be stressed.

Truman Was Appreciative

When it was all over and the victory won, Mr. Truman showed his appreciation by inviting Boyle to join him on his vacation at Key West. Boyle flew down with Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also a great favorite with the Chief Executive.

Senator McGrath and Boyle are close friends, and reports of rivalry between the two are extremely painful to them. McGrath, busy with his senatorial duties on Capitol Hill, realized that he could not spare the time to handle administrative details in the national committee. He recommended to President Truman that Boyle be made executive vice chairman to take over the work, which includes the checking of patronage.

The post carries no salary, and remains a sideline to Boyle's law practice. He has his law office at 1029 Vermont ave. nw.

Boyle, a 6-footer weighing 175 pounds, was born 46 years ago at Leavenworth, Kans. He moved to Kansas City, Mo., as a boy and attended Westport High School and Kansas City Junior College. In 1922 he came to Washington and attended Georgetown University Law School for two years. He finished up his law course and got his degree at the Kansas City School of Law in 1926.

Boyle got into politics as a youngster of 16. He started out as a precinct worker for the Pendergast organization, passing out campaign literature in Kansas City's silk-stocking Fourth Ward. Later he became leader of the Eighth Ward, which took in the old fourth.

As a result of his political activity, he became secretary to the director of police in Kansas City. For a time, after a political scandal had swept the Pendergast organization, he was himself director of police.

His family was friendly with the Truman family, and he met the President-to-be about 20 years ago. In 1941, after the then Senator Truman had set up his war-investigating committee, Boyle came here to serve as assistant counsel. Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan was then secretary to Mr. Truman. When Vaughan went into the Army, Boyle took over as secretary and executive assistant.

When Mr. Truman became Vice President, Boyle opened a law office here.

Boyle is married to the former Genevieve C. Hayde and they have two children, Jean Marie, 18, a student at Chevy Chase Junior College, and Barbara Ann, 16, a student at the Holy Cross Academy. The family lives at 2924 Upton st. nw.

Scott Blasts At Kilgore and Pepper Actions

By the United Press

Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., of the Republican National Committee, said yesterday that President Truman's "fair deal" actually is "an ordeal for all citizens who want honesty and decency in Government."

He issued a statement citing two episodes of the past week to show that the "Democratic rulers are spending more time and energy shoving people around than in trying to put through a constructive legislative program."

The incidents:

1. Disciplinary action taken by the Navy against Capt. Ross A. Dierdorff, its San Diego public relations officer, for making a slurring remark about Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.).

2. Senator Pepper's clash with a witness at Senate Labor Committee hearings over the Florida Senator's charge that during the war the sons of manufacturers stayed home and got rich while the sons of the workers died on the battlefields.

Scott noted that Dierdorff was relieved of command for saying, in defense of Admiral B. H. Bierie, his former superior who was criticized by Kilgore, that the West Virginia Senator was "not fit for the Admiral to wipe his shoes on."

"Have we progressed so far toward fascism that it is a crime to think or speak disrespectfully of those vested with a little temporary authority?" he asked.

"Once upon a time it was a crime to think ill of the King. Is it now a crime to think—or speak—ill of one of the princes-of-privileges on the Potomac?"

Scott said Pepper, in questioning Ira Mosher of the National Association of Manufacturers, "delivered himself of the remarkably mendacious statement that during the war 'it was the workers' sons who died on the battlefields while the sons of manufacturers stayed home and got rich.'"

"With characteristic taste, Pepper made that remark to a witness who lost three close relatives in action during the war, while a fourth—a son— was shot down in combat and spent many months in the jungles before being rescued," Scott said.

Clarified Policy On Far East Asked

The Senate Armed Services Committee should clear the air on American military policy in the Far East with a full dress hearing, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) said yesterday.

He added in an interview that not only Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Allied commander in Japan, should be called home to testify but that other top military leaders should be heard.

Southerners In Senate Push Housing Issue

By the United Press

Key Southern Democratic Senators will urge early floor action on public housing, partly to delay a showdown on antifilibuster rules changes, it was revealed yesterday.

Chairman Sparkman (D., Ala.) of a Banking subcommittee on housing, said he hoped to have a compromise long-range housing bill ready for Senate action by February 28. Senate public housing supporters are working out details of a compromise they hope will draw heavy support from both Republicans and Democrats.

Speedy Senate action would help carry out President Truman's campaign pledge on housing. But it also would give the Southerners a powerful argument to postpone action on the explosive rules change, also due up for consideration February 28.

State Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas said last week he would move to sidetrack the rules change fight when "important" legislation comes up.

Sparkman said he would try to "follow the wishes of the leadership" but he thought housing should come ahead in any event.

"All of the President's economic proposals ought to take precedence over what we all admit will be a long-drawn-out fight over changing a Senate rule," he said. He added, however, he had not rushed the housing hearings, which end today, just to head off the rules change.

Brewster Again Assails American Help to Dutch

By The Associated Press

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) asked yesterday how the continued grant of United States millions to a Dutch government "using all its power to crush" the Indonesian Republic can be reconciled with "our declaration that our sympathies are all with the republic."

Brewster is author of pending legislation which would cut off Marshall Plan funds to the Dutch unless they conform to orders of the United Nations Security Council in Indonesia.

Brewster, interviewed on Ed. Hart's radio program (WWDC), estimated that the Dutch have received about one billion dollars in Marshall Plan, World Bank and Export-Import Bank funds and that they want 600 million dollars more under any extension of the ECA program.

Dutch and British interests, he argued, have been drawing about 200 million dollars annually out of Indonesia while the native populace, he said, "get about 15 or 30 cents a day for a family of five."

No Pat Cure

Centralized Trend Is Hit By Millikin

By the United Press

Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) said yesterday the American people are endangering control of their own affairs by leaning so much on the Federal Government.

The chairman of the Senate Republican Conference said in an interview that the "look-to-Washington" philosophy has been growing since the early days of the New Deal and that, unless it is curbed, many of the things which people did for themselves in their own communities will be coming to them with a Washington label.

Millikin said he didn't have a pat cure for the trend. But he suggested the answer lies both in the home communities and in Washington.

He cited President Truman's $41,900,000,000 budget for fiscal 1950 and his request for a four-billion-dollar tax increase, as an example. He said a budget that size means $342 million dollars in Federal taxes in Colorado alone.

"As the Federal Government drains it off, it isn't available for local services," he said. "The taxpayer loses control of money from his own pocket and the local communities lose control over a lot of things they would like to do.

"As a result, the 'look to Washington' sentiment grows and snowballs. The more you demand in Federal services the higher your Federal taxes."

AMA's Health Plan Assailed As 'Fancy Press Relations'

By the United Press

The American Medical Association's 12-point health program was assailed yesterday as "a fancy press relations job" designed to screen the organization's opposition to national health insurance.

Dr. Channing Frothingham, chairman of the Committee for the Nation's Health, said in a statement that the AMA "has not moved an inch" and still proposes only "voluntary health insurance" to meet the national health problem.

Frothingham, former president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, said the AMA has recently hired "a clever publicity firm" for what "is reported to be the biggest public relations fee in history."

"That publicity firm has begun to pay off," he said. "Its first achievement is a fancy press relations job designed to obscure the AMA's stubborn opposition to any program which would bring medical care within the means of the average man.

"Voluntary health insurance has proved it cannot meet the Nation's needs. Despite the AMA's frantic effort to promote such programs in order to head off compulsory insurance, the voluntary medical insurance plans favored by the AMA cover less than a sixth of the population and offer only limited protection.

"They are either wholly controlled by the AMA's State and local medical societies or are merely cash benefits paying a fraction of medical costs through insurance companies."

The committee for the Nation's health is composed of physicians, businessmen, labor leaders and churchmen who favor President Truman's compulsory health insurance program.

KAISER-FRAZER

WE HAVE BOUGHT WILLOW RUN . . . when we started we selected this huge plant because there we could do more manufacturing under one roof than in any other automobile plant. It offered great potential economies of operation. Willow Run is now our home. We're proud of it and find it a more efficient production unit every day.

STEEL . . . it takes tons of steel to build automobiles in volume. Steel has been hard to get. To secure the high quality sheet we insist on using, we had to get part way into the steel business. That is why we bought a blast furnace in Cleveland and other steel facilities. Now we're assured of thousands of tons of automotive steel each month for the next five years. This eliminates much of the premium costs we have previously paid for steel.

OUR OWN ENGINE PLANT is operating at constantly increasing efficiency. We are producing new higher compression engines which give faster acceleration, greater power and sustained economy at all speeds—you get more from every drop of gasoline you buy.

Swedish Premier Deplores Pact Split

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 20 (AP).—Premier Tage Erlander said today the decision of the Norwegion Labor Party to support the government in favor of the North Atlantic Pact meant that a division of Scandinavia is now a fact.

The division was causing deep grief in all three Scandinavian countries, the Premier said in a speech at Katrineholm.

He said Sweden's traditional policy of neutrality would not be altered by the Norwegian decision, but he saw increasing difficulties ahead for his country.

Sweden's position, he added would have been still more difficult without the categorical assertions obtained in Washington by Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange to the effect that Norway would not have to put any part of her territory at the disposal of big power armies in peacetime.

Norway's Pact Entry Now Virtually Certain

Oslo, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The governing Labor Party of Norway tonight formally urged the nation to seek "binding cooperation with the western democracies."

Labor Party officials released the text of a resolution adopted last night by a vote of 329 to 35 which virtually assures that Norway will join the North Atlantic security pact despite Russian opposition.

"The party congress is of the opinion that Norway must try to solve its security problem in solidaric and binding cooperation with the western democracies in the foreign political field," the resolution said. "This cooperation must build on the United Nations Charter and must be a peace and defense cooperation in form and content."

With this clear mandate, Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange was expected to go before the Storing (Parliament) sometime this week with a concrete proposal.

Lange could ask that Norway join immediately in the Atlantic Pact negotiations now going on in Washington, or he could suggest that Norway wait until other nations sign the agreement.

French Centrists Ask Quick Signing of Pact

Paris, Feb. 20 (U.P.). — The national committee of the Centrist Popular Republican Movement Party called for the early conclusion of the Atlantic defense pact today "in order to assure the security of the democratic countries and to maintain in Europe an atmosphere of liberty."

Cites ECA Reports

3 Billion Aid Cut Sought By Capehart

By The Associated Press

A proposal to slash three billion dollars off European recovery funds will be made to the Senate today by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.).

Spearheading a drive by critics of the program, Capehart told a reporter he would suggest that some of the money thus saved be spent in helping Europe rearm.

He predicted that, if the proposed North Atlantic defense alliance is approved, Congress will be asked to provide two billion dollars or more to rearm participating countries.

"If the threat of communism still exisits at the time, I think we could well use some of this ECA money to pay for arms for our friends," he said.

Certain of Support

Capehart said he is certain of some support in the fight to cut Marshall Plan funds despite expected approval by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this week of the full $5,580,000,000 asked.

The House, too, is making progress on the foreign aid bill. Its Foreign Affairs Committee is expected to wind up hearings this week on the needs of the program for a 15-month period beginning April 1.

Capehart said his move to whack the amount asked by more than half will be based on the Economic Cooperation Administration's own statement that Europe has about reached prewar production levels.

"If these European countries are in as good condition as the ECA reports, we can level off our aid," Capehart said, adding:

"Why are American taxpayers under any obligation to place any nation back in better shape than it was before the war? It doesn't make sense."

ECA Report Quoted

Quoting from ECA's report to Congress last September 30, Capehart said the agency reported that during 1946, the first postwar year "production moved ahead vigorously and by the end of the year the index, excluding western Germany, approached the 1938 level." It added that "further advances were recorded in 1947."

"That was before western Europe had the benefit of the billions of dollars we have been pouring out," Capehart said.

Capehart turned to a section of the report which said that "new and higher levels (of production) are required to make Europe self-sustaining."

"How high are we going to build these new and higher levels the ECA is talking about?" Capehart demanded. "How much more do we have to build up Europe with American taxpayers' dollars?"

Bloom Opposes "Special Interests"

Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said meanwhile that it won't do any good for "special interests" in the United States if they seek special treatment in the recovery program.

Bloom named the machine tool industry and coal exporters as some he said are apparently seeking special consideration.

D. T. Buckley, representing the Coal Exporters Association, told the Senate committee that shipments of American coal to Europe should be increased by ECA. Buckley is due to appear before Bloom's committee Monday.

"I want to help American industry," Bloom said, "but this bill is not for American relief, it is for European relief. As soon as we get them back on their feet it will help us anyway."

The Progressive Party announced that Henry A. Wallace will testify at 10 a. m. Wednesday before the House committee. He has charged that the European recovery program is used for political and military purposes.

U. S. Admitting 14,000 DPs

By the United Press

Ugo Carusi, chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission, said yesterday that some 14,000 homeless Europeans will have been admitted to the United States by the end of March.

He said in an interview that entry of DP's is increasing gradually after getting off to a slow start, but that there still is room for improvement.

He urged Congress to act soon on legislation which would make major changes in the DP law passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress. A House judiciary subcommittee is expected to begin hearings on the bill soon after March 1.

President Truman signed the present law after protesting that it discriminated against Jews and Catholics. Others have said that the law has slowed down the DP program.

Soviet Orders Corrections in Encyclopedia

Moscow, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The government has ordered publication of a new edition of the Soviet Encyclopedia to correct "crude theoretical and political errors" in the first edition, it was announced today.

The new edition will be edited by Sergei Vavilov, president of the Academy of Sciences.

It was held that the first edition "does not reflect the great changes which have occurred in life in the Soviet Union and foreign countries."

Hence, the cabinet said in its decree:

"The second edition must broadly illuminate universal and historic socialist triumphs in our land and the achievements of the USSR in the fields of economics, science, culture and art. It must exhaustively show the superiority of socialist culture over the culture of the capitalist world."

Moscow Now Claims First Berlin Bombing

London, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Moscow Radio said today that Russians were first to bomb Berlin.

"Soviet naval pilots were the first to bomb Berlin and other cities deep in the enemy's rear," Moscow said. "During the night of August 8, 1941, bomber pilots of the Baltic Navy broke through fog and severe storms and bombed the brightly illuminated city of Berlin."

The British Royal Air Force lists its first bombing of Berlin August 25, 1940.

Leader Asks Freedom Soon For Austria

Vienna, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Chancellor Leopold Figl charged today that the four-power occupation of Austria was "an incredible injustice" and warned that Austria never will accept Yugoslavia's reparations and territorial claims.

In an address to a Catholic Peoples Party rally in the Soviet zone of Vienna, Figl called for early conclusion of the Austrian peace treaty negotiations so the country can have its liberty.

"Other countries—countries who fought side by side with Hitler—have been given their treaties and freedom long ago," he said. "Only liberated Austria is still being occupied. Austria, which before 1938 offered resistance to Hitlerism to the best of its abilities, and which in 1945 started a reconstruction so successful that it is without example in the rest of the world, must be given its freedom or else the small powers will lose their belief in the good will of the big powers."

The foreign minister deputies of the United States, Britain, France and Russia, are meeting in London now in an effort to write the Austrian treaty which would open the way for the end of the four-power occupation.

Roatta Found Innocent In Rome Defense Case

Rome, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Gen Mario Roatta, former Italian army chief-of-staff, and eight other officers were found innocent today of having abandoned the defense of Rome in 1944, permitting the Germans to occupy the city.

East-West Trade Gains

By the United Press

Trade between eastern and western Europe increased during 1948, despite Russia's efforts to dominate the business of nations within her orbit, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The increase was revealed in an article in the department's foreign commerce weekly.

It said that Russia, after deciding to stay out of the Marshall Plan, made many new trade agreements with eastern European countries aimed at tying their economies to that of the Soviet Union.

In most cases the agreements called for larger exchanges of goods over a five-year period "aimed ultimately to give Russia the dominant place in their imports and exports," it stated.

But the eastern European countries, despite this announced plan, "continued and apparently intensified their efforts during 1948 to negotiate agreements with the countries of western Europe . . ."

It said that while East-West trade is still below the prewar level in Europe, "such trade data as are available for 1948 indicate a continuing moderately upward trend in the share of western Europe in imports derived from eastern Europe."

Exiled Czech Sure Masaryk Killed Himself

London (Monday), Feb. 21 (AP).—An exiled Czechoslovak official who worked with Jan Masaryk in Prague until just before his death said in a book published today he is certain Masaryk committed suicide and was not murdered.

"But he was murdered spiritually," wrote Josef Josten, now head of the information service of Free Czechoslovakia in London.

Josen was a Czechoslovak Foreign Office official during and after the war. He was purged from government service when the Communists seized power last February.

His book, "Oh, My Contry!" presents an inside view of the Czechoslovak crisis which, he wrote, was the fruition of careful plans laid in Moscow.

He related that Communist pressure on President Eduard Benes was more than an "aged, tired man" could endure, and that the President's final agreement to accept a Communist government was extorted from him with threats that several hundred of his associates and personal friends would be arrested as hostages.

Masaryk Chose Suicide

Josten wrote that Masaryk chose suicide—that he was a man who did not have to die. His body was found beneath a window in Prague last March 10.

Masaryk, Josten related, had considered leaving the country and had actually worked out two plans to escape. But finally he chose to face the storm.

Josten presented Masaryk's attitude toward the crisis confronting him as follows:

"He changed his mind (about escaping) because he believed by this final act he could do more good for his own people in showing them that life is not so valuable that it must be kept for its own sake if those things that make life worth while disapear, and in showing them, too, that if necessary one must give one's life in order that evil is exposed and can be fought against. He acted for the sake of mankind too—as a whole—because mankind reacts more to acts and deeds than to words."

Fight Story Discounted

Josten personally discounted extravagant theorizing that there had been a fight before Masaryk's lifeless body was found on the pavement four stories under the window of his bedroom in the Foreign Office. According to one account which gained currency in America Masaryk killed two of his assailants, and it has been established that three coffins were taken from the Foreign Office.

"The simple fact is that everything was confusion after Masaryk's death, and several officials tried to take charge," Josten said. "Three coffins were ordered and delivered, and were carried out, but two were empty."

Sofia Reads Methodist 'Confession'

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—All Sofia newspapers today printed a "confession" by another of the 15 Protestant clergymen to be tried here next week on charges of treason, espionage and black marketing.

The statement, attributed to Yanko Ivanov, Methodist Church supervisor, named American Legation officials, Methodist educators, and a Hollywood movie company as instigators and paymasters of an alleged Protestant spy ring in Bulgaria.

Ivanov is a deputy to Vassil Zyapkov, head of the Supreme Council of Evangelical Churches, who "confessed" yesterday that he sent espionage data to British and American officials.

Ivanov was said to have named Cyril Black, an American Legation secretary in 1945, as the key man in "espionage activities." The newspapers said that Miss Melany Turner, principal of the Methodist American College at Lovetch, and her successor, Helen Cooper, were Black's chief assistants.

Ivanov reportedly admitted receiving large sums of money from Black, the two college principals, and a representative of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Hollywood studio.

Meanwhile, Catholic, Jewish, Protestant, Moslem and Orthodox Church leaders issued declarations "condemning the activities" of the 15 Protestant ministers. Various Protestant leaders have been making similar declarations since the arrests were announced 10 days ago. The pastors are scheduled to go on trial Friday.

U. S. Can Get Sufficient Oil At Home for War, Kerr Asserts

By The Associated Press

Directing his words at Russia, Senator Kerr (D., Okla.) said yesterday this country can get enough oil right at home to fight a war.

Kerr said that Prime Minister Stalin "might act entirely different" if he knew that.

Stalin may have the idea that he could cripple us "by merely moving in and cutting off our supply of oil from the Middle East, or anywhere else," Kerr observed. He spoke in a radio interview with Commentator Charles Parmer, over Station WPIK.

Oil is available and can be developed on the continental shelf under Gulf of Mexico waters to make up the difference between what we have and what we will need in the next 50 years, for the gulf.

Kerr said he based this statement on his own belief, and that of experts.

In addition, he said, oil is available, "in practically unlimited quantities" in the form of shale oil in western mountain States—and in Mexico and Canada.

Kerr estimated the amount of oil recoverable from the Gulf of Mexico at 25 billion barrels.

"Is the tapping of it so expensive that the United States should finance the operation?" Parmer asked.

"Not at all," Kerr replied. "The United States has never financed the oil industry; does not need to now, and never will."

Kerr himself has found oil in the gulf.

Czechs Mark Anniversary

Prague, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Communists today celebrated the first anniversary of the coup which gave them control of Czechoslovakia.

One year ago the non-Communist cabinet members resigned, and six days later President Eduard Benes accepted a Communist-approved cabinet, thereby recognizing that the coup had succeeded.

Newspapers said today that the last 12 months have been "a year without reactionaries." The Communist organ Rude Pravo said the "unreliable elements" were "liquidated by a page of history which will never be turned back!"

Education Minister Zdenek Nejedly denounced the late President Benes in a radio address and charged that only the presence of the Soviet army saved Czechoslovakia from becoming a "military dictatorship" after World War II.

Taft Gives Backing To N. Atlantic Pact

joined. It said lack of an automatic war clause would give the United States virtual "veto power" over the whole security arrangement.

Observers here pointed out, however, that:

1. No treaty binding the United States to go to war without a declaration of war by Congress would have any effect, since the Constitution not only reserves that right to Congress, but Congress must appropriate funds for any military effort. Nevertheless, in the past, as in World War II, for instance, a congressional declaration of war has several times been simply formal recognition of a state of war already existing.

2. It would be virtually impossible for Russia to attack any western European nation without immediately involving the United States.

The Foreign Policy Association report said "the very process of rearmament will generate fear which still further armament will be needed to allay." Thus, it said, there would be created "a mounting spiral of expenditures in which military estimates will prevail over considerations of economic and social recovery."

These additional arguments were advanced:

1. The proposed alliance would not tend to hasten the departure of Russian troops from Europe and some attempt at settlement with Russia might be better at this time.

2. Although it is desirable that Europeans depend increasingly upon themselves for military strength as, under the Marshall Plan, they are supposed to do for economic strength, "some American observers" feel Europeans might be led to develop "too great dependence . . . on armaments from the United States."

3. Some critics feel the treaty would violate the United Nations Charter or that it might "eventually hamper" that organization.

4. Arms supplied by the United States might be used to subdue native uprisings in colonies.

5. A situation might result in which American strength would be used to suppress internal disorders in European countries and to support "the maintenance of existing regimes and economic and social conditions."

The report called attention to an alternative proposal advanced by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, former State Department consultant. This proposal provides for an agreement, open to all U. N. members, including Russia, who pledged themselves to carry out their promise to resist aggression as expressed in the U. N. Charter.

From other members of the Senate yesterday came support for the pact.

As the result of negotiations now about to begin, it was hoped in official circles here that the pact might be ready for signature by the middle of March. Involved in talks already are Canada, Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, with Norway, Denmark, Portugal, Italy and Iceland regarded as possible members. Sweden and Ireland have made it clear they will stay out for the time being.

Acting President of China Flies to Canton For Surprise Showdown on a Prompt Peace

Canton, China, Feb. 20 (U.P.)—Acting President Li Tsung-jen flew here today for a surprise showdown with diehard Nationalist leaders who oppose his policy of an immediate peace with the Communists.

He issued a formal statement condemning "any political faction" which "refuses to bow to the peace pleas of the great masses." This clearly referred to the faction headed by Premier Sun Fo with whom Li has split.

His visit was expected to result in a virtual ultimatum to Sun Fo to return to Nanking or resign. There was some question whether Li actually had power to ask Sun to quit, but one report said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek had ordered Sun's resignation to prevent outright rupture in the government.

The Nanking China Times said one of Li's peace missions headed by Shanghai Civic Leader W. W. Yen had sent Li's personal proposals to the Communist leaders and that Shao Li-tze, official peace representative, who accompanied the Shanghai group, was in Shihchiachuan, North China, consulting the Communists directly.

Meanwhile it was made known that Legislator Chang Chin-hua was drafting a peace plan for approval of the Legislative Yuan as a basis for Communist talk. It was understood the plan called for consolidation of the Nationalist and Communist armies.

ior minister under Villarroel, was described as the "principal axis of the subdued revolution." He was identified as inspector-general of development and tourist travel for Peru.

Juan Luis Gutierrez Trainer, former mayor of La Paz, was named as another leader in the plot. The Bolivian government said he also had a Peruvian post dealing with tourist matters.

Twelve persons arrested were deported at once to Arica, Chile. They included: Franklin Antezana Paz, former president of the Central Bank; Gustaro Chacon, former foreign minister; Dionisio Foianini, former public works minister, and Augusto Pena Sosa, director general of livestock in the agriculture ministry.

Jews and Arabs Begin Exchange of Prisoners

Jerusalem, Feb. 20 (AP).—A large-scale exchange of prisoners seized by Israel and Trans-Jordan in the Palestine war began today.

It was intrepreted as further evidence both sides believe the fighting will not resume.

Under escort, 153 Palestine Arab prisoners were taken through the Israeli lines and handed over to their people. Israel is exchanging 4800 Palestinian and Trans-Jordan prisoners for 600 Jewish prisoners.

Pincers Closing on Burma Rebels

Rangoon, Feb. 20 (AP).—Burmese government troops closed a pincers trap today on the main stronghold of the Karen rebels in the battle of suburban Insein.

Two government columns sought to pinch off a fortified brick and concrete building—once the property of the American Baptist Mission—which the Karen tribesmen have converted into a fort.

The Karens slowly curled back under a succession of heavy blows by government troops reinforced by armed sailors whose ships had bombarded Insein.

The battle appeared to have reached a decisive stage. The Karens, fighting to establish their own independent state, battled their way into the town on January 31 and have fought it out there since.

Builders to Drive For Economy Home

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 20.—More than 60 Washington builders arrived here today to attend the convention and exposition of the National Association of Home Builders.

Delegates said target of the Nation's private home-building industry this year will be a big expansion of the "economy house" program inaugurated in 1947.

Several Washington builders evidenced a fear, however, that home buyers have a general misunderstanding of the meaning of low-cost homes, and may risk losses if they wait for builders to erect quality homes at price $2000 and $3000 under the present market.

Warning to Buyers

Clyde J. Verkerke, Virginia builder, pointed out that many home buyers do not realize that construction of minimum-type dwellings is one thing, while construction of quality homes using the best in materials, to satisfy the most prudent of investors, is another matter.

Builders are striving in every way possible to create homes for low-income groups, declared Frank Calcara, Cheverly, Md., builder. If the public delays purchasing of quality homes now because of a misunderstanding of the term "economy house," he warned the real loser may be the typical home buying family, in case of a price rise during peak construction this summer.

Experimental Homes

James Pearson, executive secretary of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, said two experimental model homes under construction in District Heights, Md., by the association, would be finished by March 15. He estimated that the one-bedroom frame home would sell for around $7200, while a two-bedroom frame home would cost around $8200. Prices will be set after association officials examine cost data sheets.

The homes will be opened to the public at a later date. If they win public acceptance, and provided mortgage groups make building funds available, other members of the association will erect scores of the homes at various sites around Washington in efforts to satisfy the demand for low-cost housing, it was stated.

No Price Miracles

Clarke Daniel, vice president of the association, pointed out, however, that the public should not expect price miracles in the drive for lower-priced housing. The "guinea pig" homes will be of quality construction and materials, but, he said, they will not contain the complete equipment to be found in higher priced, better quality residences.

He indicated that the "economy homes" to be erected in Washington by association members will be homes that people need, not those that many dream about.

Members of the District of Columbia Savings and Loan League already have pledged the major portion of their lending program to homes costing under $10,000.

Edward R. Carr, Washington builder, and past president of the National Association of Home Builders, will deliver the keynote address Monday. He said he will ask labor, Government, mortgage bankers and home builders to unite in the drive to build cheaper homes.

Jurists Assail Cardinal Trial

condemnation to its "legal and juridical injustice."

Attack Espionage Charge

Turning to the charge of espionage against the cardinal, the 14 legal experts took up the allegation that information had been found in his cellar concerning the movement of the Soviet Army in Hungary, Soviet-Hungarian economic relations and summaries of Hungarian cabinet meetings.

"The bulk of this evidence related not to the Hungarian state, but to a foreign foe, which according to international law is unjustly depriving the Hungarian nation of its right to hold free elections and to adopt a form of government . . . desired by a majority of the people," the jurists charged.

Stress Individual's Right

A third charge cited was that Cardinal Mindszenty had asked Selden Chapin, United States envoy, not to return the Crown of St. Stephen to Hungarian authorities. On this point, the local lawyers declared:

"Until ownership of this Crown, so cherished by the Hungarian people because of its national and religious associations, has been adjudicated by an impartial agency in conformity with law, every individual is legally entitled to advocate whatever disposition of it may seem just to him."

Finally, the cardinal "appears to have stated" during the trial that members of his household sold gifts of American dollars in excess of the legal currency exchange rate, when it was charged that he did so. He assumed responsibility and would make reparations, according to reports of the trial.

"Surely no one can believe that these facts justified or motivated this trial," declared the jurists' statement.

Rights Seen Flaunted

Citing human rights recognized by the United Nations Charter, the Hungarian Peace Treaty and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the U. N. General Assembly, the legal experts declared these essential freedoms were "flaunted" by the Hungarian Communist Party.

These fundamental and inalienable rights, the statement declared, include freedom of religious worship, of political opinion, of speech and publication and of public meeting.

Other signers of the protest statement were:

William H. Collins, former assistant United States district attorney; Hugh J. Fegan, dean of Georgetown University Law School; Charles J. Fahy, former Solicitor General of the United States, and Mary Frances Glenn, president of the District of Columbia Women's Bar Association.

Also, Vladimir Gsovski, head of the section on foreign law in the Congressional Library law library; James J. Hayden, dean of the Columbus University School of Law; Milton W. King, former president of the D. C. Bar Association; William E. Leahy, president of Columbus University School of Law; Horatio R. Rogers, dean of the Washington College of Law, and William C. Van Vleck, former dean of George Washington University Law School.

Pole Told to Economize

Warsaw, Feb. 20 (AP).—The Council of Ministers today ordered all branches of Polish industry to economize. An announcement said the government wants to save 287 million dollars in operating costs.

3 Mechanics Building Their Own Homes

The Washington Po

CAN'T WAIT—Three Falls Church residents decided they couldn't wait for the building industry to come up with housing they could afford so they've gone ahead building their own homes. Above is a six-room, brick-veneer house they started last October. It will be the residence of Robert Bower, 30, of 709 Poplar dr. Bower (at right, below), is shown with his two friends, C. W. Speetzen, 27, of 711 Poplar dr. (left), and Ed Hutchins, 32, of 707 Poplar dr. (center), as they look over blueprints for Speetzen's house

In nearby Falls Church, three hardy Virginians are solving their housing problems frontier style.

Last year, Robert Bauer, 30, Ed Hutchins, 32, and C. W. Speetzen, 27—all mechanics for Capital Airlines—decided they could each use a new home.

Building costs being what they are, they voted to build three houses themselves, co-operatively.

Friends, including Ralph Stowell, a fellow mechanic, dropped around to kibitz, stayed to work. A co-operative neighbor, E. T. Rowland, provided electric current to turn a tiny concrete mixer.

Today, the first product of the triple housing venture stands, nearly finished, at 709 Poplar dr., in the Virginia Forest section of Falls Church.

When it's completed early in April, it will be home for Bauer, his wife and their 3-year-old girl. The three mechanics all neophytes in the home-building game, began it last October.

Bauer's home has three bedrooms, a living room, dinette, kitchen and bath. Completed, it will be brick-faced, with a finished basement recreation room and an attic.

Cost for the house alone—$8400, the trio estimates, with lot cost bringing the total to $10,000. Built by a private contractor, they say, the house alone would have cost $12,000.

It wasn't hard to figure whose house to build first, the builders said. Bauer has to move out of his present quarters by April 15.

Hutchins' house is next in line. On his next-door lot at 707 Poplar dr., the foundation hole already is attracting a sizable lake and numerous frogs. "We'll get after my house about March 15," Hutchins said.

Both Hutchins and Speetzen (nicknamed "Speed") will have less expensive, Cape Cod-style frame houses, with two instead of three bedrooms and no brick facing. Speetzen will locate at 711 Poplar dr.

The trio's wives balked slightly at the project when it first was launched, the men admit. Seems they missed their husbands on weekends.

"Frankly, they were skeptical at first," Bauer said. "Now, all we hear is 'how soon'?"

Dr. Shapley, director of the Harvard University Observatory and one of the country's leading astronomers, said the conference was being called because the "survival and growth of our modern civilization concerns so many socially minded artists, scientists and professional men and women."

"Cannot they, as specialized citizens, assist in the difficult work of finding ways to live and let live in these days when our world society seems to be afflicted with the imbalance of a physics too strong, a sociology too weak?" Shapley asked.

body heard my broadcasts, and, if so, how they could have any earthly idea of what I was talking about."

The department also said the time quoted excerpts from Pound's broadcasts and said "the general trend of his comments follows the familiar Axis propaganda line: that international Jewry is the root of the world's difficulties, that the United States is being used as a pawn by the British, and that the Fascist way of life is the hope of the world."

The Department also said "Pound's style as a broadcaster has much in common with his style as a writer: much of what he says is meaningless and incoherent, further complicated at times by the use of words of his own coinage."

Pound's prize winning book, "The Pisan Cantos," is written in the irregular form characteristic of much modern poetry, and displays his wide-ranging knowledge of old literatures, ranging from the classical to medieval to Chinese, as well as modern.

Greek, Chinese and Arabic mingle with American dialect, coined words and abbreviations, Latin, French, German and Jewish dialect.

Pound, who has lived abroad most of his adult life, was found of unsound mind by a District Court luancy jury in February 13, 1946, before coming to trial.

A report by four psychiatrists said he had been abnormal for many years, has become a paranoic victim of his own grandiose notions, and lacked judgment about what was happening to him. His condition is said to be gradually deteriorating.

Poets Are Not Pleased By Award to Pound

New York, Feb. 20 (NYHT)—Reaction of poets today was unfavorable to Ezra Pound, the expatriate who was awarded the $1000 Bollingen prize for his esoteric "Pisan Cantos."

Origin of the prize's name is something of a puzzle even to the jurors. W. H. Auden, one of the jurors and an avant-garde poet, said "Y'know, I really don't know" when asked. Wilard Thorp, another juror and a professor of English at Princeton, said he thought it a "family name." (The Bollinger Foundation was set up by the family of the late Andrew W. Mellon.)

"Aside from the book itself," said Louis Untermeyer, poet and anthologist, "if the award were given to Pound for his work in toto, as a pioneering poet influencing his time, there might be some justification for it. But the book is concededly his poorest work It's a shabby, unintelligible work. It's a rag-bag and tail end of what is Pound at his worst.

"The Pisan Cantos' is the tag-end of what was once a very good mind. It shows the beginnings of a very disordered mind, one affected by the seeds of fascism. For a time which cries out for order in the arts, this is certainly a celebration of disorder."

Robert Hillyer said he "never admired" Pound and said the prize followed the "fashion of modern critics and poets." Pound's work, he said, was "beyond my comprehension in the field of poetry." He said that the award was "regrettable," but for esthetic rather than political or medical reasons.

The cause of modern poetry, Hillyer said, was advanced by "pressure groups," whose tactics are "thorough and penetrating."

"The whole group of modernists deliberately defied the public, getting them off from poetry by trying to make it ocult," he said. He repeated he never saw anything to admire, "not one line," in Pound.

Amy Bonner, Eastern representative of Poetry, recalled that Pound was the magazine's one-time European corrospondent but was at a loss for the right word to describe Pound's insistence on what he decreed as poetry and which eventually caused his removal as European correspondent. It was during the World War I period, Miss Bonner said. Yet, she remarked, during Pound's useful period for the magazine, he brought several young poets forward.

"There are two schools on Mr. Pound," said Miss Bonner. "One group condemns him outright and the other separates his standing as a poet from his feelings as a man." She called him a source poet for other writers in the metier.

White House To Be 'Fairly' Safe Shelter

By the United Press

The White House will be comparatively well prepared for the atomic age when the present $5,412,000 remodeling job is finished, Architect Lorenzo Winslow indicated yesterday.

While none of the funds will be used to build an atom bomb-proof shelter, he said, the Executive Mansion already has a "pretty good" underground hideout, built for the late President Roosevelt at the start of World War II.

Above the ground, the shaky old building will be transformed into a thoroughly modern, fireproof structure. New steel-and-concrete interior walls will replace the present sagging partitions which rest on soft clay.

All this won't make the White House "safe" from a direct hit by an atomic bomb. Nothing will do that.

But studies of the atom-bombed Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki show that modern reinforced concrete buildings withstood the terrible blast far better than other types of structures.

The present White House bomb shelter, built at a cost of $65,000 in early 1942, is "about 20 feet" underground, Winslow said, and has a 9-foot concrete ceiling shielded by a quarter-inch steel plate.

"I've been told that any shelter more than 5 feet underground is reasonably safe," he said. "But I've also heard figures of up to 60 feet underground mentioned. One guess is as good as another, I suppose, until we really know more about it."

Truman Qualifies As 'Typical Tenant'

New York, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—President Truman was made an honorary member of the Tenants Council today because the White House is so "dilapidated" it makes him a typical tenant.

"The condition of the White House, dilapidated and run down, badly in need of repairs, fully establishes you as a typical tenant in the present housing situation," the citation said. "We hope you will have better luck in securing repairs and services from your landlords than most tenants are having these days."

Drive On to Save Minimum Pay Bill

By The Associated Press

Administration supporters on Capitol Hill drove hard yesterday to save the 75-cent minimum wage bill in the House, but some admitted they may not be able to keep it intact.

The House Labor Committee closed public hearings Friday on the Administration's bill, and a similar bill backed by the AFL and CIO, and called a recess until March 1.

The Administration asked for legislation raising the minimum from its present 40 cents an hour to 75, with a provision for putting it on up to $1 in some industries.

It also asked for a general wage-hour law revision, which would extend the act to some retail businesses and would cover "activities affecting commerce." The law now applies only to interstate commerce itself.

Democratic committee members have conceded that they may lose everything in the bill but the minimum wage section, because of the opposition of a strong coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats. Under present plans, there will be no showdown until after March 1.

A House Democratic leader said yesterday that Administration Democrats may have to settle for a bill raising the minimum wage to 65 cents an hour, with a procedure for increasing it up to 75 cents a nickel at a time over the next two years.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) said yesterday that the establishment of universal minimum wages "will inevitably lead to the Federal fixing of prices and then, under such a Federal regimentation, we will cease completely to have a free economy."

END STRIKE—The three above were principals in ending the Philadelphia transit strike late Sunday. They are Charles E. Ebert, president of the transit company; Mayor Bernard Samuel, and Michael J. Quill, international president of the striking CIO Transport Workers Union. It was Quill's impassioned plea to the rank-and-file that brought settlement after the union executive board rejected agreement (Story, Page 1) centration of unreviewable power" in the hands of the NLRB general counsel, providing for special elections when unions seek to ask employers for union security; providing injunctive power in handling national emergency disputes; withholding from emergency fact-finding boards the power to make recommendations for settlement of disputes, and extension of the law to all types of small local businesses.

The eighteen points also included: interpreting the law to construe a picket as a union "agent" and to regard failure to comply with contract-change notification provisions of the law as a failure to bargain; providing for a "last employer's offer" election among workers at the end of an eighty-day injunctive no-strike period.

Murray said that Senator Taft has described as poorly drafted provisions for notice of contract changes; signing of non-Communist affidavits by unions which wish to use NLRB facilities; the antifeatherbedding sections and the "free speech" for employers provision.

Senator Taft, in Kenton, Ohio, yesterday, could not be reached for comment, but at committee hearings he frequently has observed that many of the Taft-Hartley Act's provisions could be improved on. The Ohio Senator also has observed on several occasions that many of the provisions with which he expressed dissatisfaction were forced into the law by amendments over his own objections.

planes which wil operate for the first time from aircraft carriers.

The anouncement did not say how or where the "simulated atomic bomb operation" would take place. It said only that it would be used as an "offensive weapon," and that the mock bombing would be accompanied by "simulated guided missile attacks."

Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic command and the U. S. Atlantic Fleet, will be in overall command.

Here is the way the Navy outlined the operations:

The first, or Bermuda, phase will consist of submarine warfare. Six guppy-snorkel type and eight standard fleet submarines will engage a striking force on its way to protect the landing at Vieques island. The striking force will be protected by land-based aircraft and hunter-killer type antisubmarine ships.

"This phase was planned primarily to pit the latest anti-submarine methods and devices against modern submarine crews," the Navy said.

The subs also oppose the landings on Vieques.

Landing of Troops

Next comes the main part of the mock battle, the landing on Vieques. A joint expeditionary force of American and Canadian soldiers, supported by ships and planes, will attack Vieques on "D-day," March 2.

The island will be defended by 320 United States Army officers and men from Fort Riley, Kans. Together with their "mechanical devices" they are supposed to be equivalent to 6000 enemy troops, the Navy said.

The second task fleet, under Vice Admiral D. B. Duncan, will aid the attack with 57 ships, 14 land-based plane squadrons 16 carrier-based squadrons, a helicopter group and several blimps.

Prior to the assault, an advanced force is slated to pave the way, with underwater demolition teams removing beach obstacles.

On March 1, an attack force will make a feint at Vieques, with the Navy's jet fighter planes taking part from their base on the Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Other Phases of Action

On D-Day will come the main assault by the joint expeditionary troops under Marine Corps Lt. Gen. Keller G. Rockey. The Navy said the Army's sixty-fifth infantry "will land on 'Red' beach on the left flank" and the Second Marine division "will take beach 'Blue' on the right flank."

"Once ashore, the 'enemy,' garbed in their own distinctive uniforms, will engage them," the announcement continued. "The island is expected to be 'secured' in three days."

Following "capture" of Vieques, there will be another submarine battle in the "Haiti phase," and on March 15 carrier-based planes will make an air attack on the United States Naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba.

This also will include anti-aircraft firing at radio-controlled target planes and special torpedo firing at high-speed tow targets.

Army Begins Demobilizing Storm Forces

By The Associated Press

The Army began demobilizing its blizzard task forces yesterday while the rest of the Nation reported snow, rain, and summer-like temperatures.

Fifth Army headquarters in Chicago reported that 4100 miles of roads were cleared in the last 24 hours, and 50 lost to new drifting. All State and Federal roads in Wyoming were open.

Most of Nebraska, the southern half of South Dakota and part of Wyoming have been approved or recommended for the discontinuance of Army operations. Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick said demobilization was under way or recommended for 85,500 square miles of the disaster area which originally embraced 177,000 square miles.

But the Army still kept an eye on the flood situation. It said the question of spring floods depends on the kind of a thaw—quick or slow—and the condition of the ground when the weather turns. Meantime, the Missouri River from St. Joseph, Mo., north to the Nebraska line ranged from bankful to overflowing. Colder weather eased the flood threat over most of the plains.

New England reported a mild spring day Saturday, but colder weather moved in overnight. Rains were general from Florida northward.

Cold air moving east from the Plains States and Canada spread over the Midwest, bringing traces of snow along with rain in small amounts. Temperatures were seasonable.

Prince Georges Golf Club Names New Manager

Appointment of a full-time manager for the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, effective March 1, was announced yesterday by the club management.

The new manager will be Joseph A. Fischer, currently in charge of the food department at the University Club. He served briefly as manager of the Prince Georges Club in 1941, before a wartime curtailment of the program. He also is a former manager of the Kenwood Club here and the Westmoreland Club in Richmond, Va.

Club officials said Fischer's appointment was in line with a program of reorganization and expansion, which includes complete renovation of the interior of the clubhouse at a cost of about $25,000.

Four-Year Chiropractic Scholarship Announced

A four-year scholarship for chiropractic study open to all students graduating from local high and preparatory schools in June, 1949, or February, 1950, was announced yesterday by Dr. Lawrence L. Voitk, a member of the District Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

The scholarship, worth $1260, is offered by the Logan Basic College of Chiropractic in St. Louis. Information may be obtained from Dr. Voitk at his office, 1925 16th st. nw.

Jewish Center Lists Fifth Music Festival

The Jewish Community Center is sponsoring its fifth annual Jewish Music Festival Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. in the center's auditorium, 16th and Q sts. nw.

Guest artists will include Cantor Sholom Katz, Frieda Balotin, violinist; Batya Heller and Dorothy Madden, dancers, and Edward A. Winston, pianist composer. The festival is open to the public without charge.

Mental Health Clinic To Hear Year's Report

Reports on activities of the Prince Georges County Mental Health Clinic during the past year will be made at the second annual meeting of the clinic's committee-at-large tonight at 8 o'clock in the Hyattsville Elementary School.

Speaker for the annual session will be Dr. Robert H. Felix, chief of the division of mental hygiene of the United States Public Health Service.

U. N. Distribution Of Isotopes Urged

The United Nations was yesterday urged to undertake supervision of the international distribution of "non-dangerous" radioactive isotopes for peaceful scientific research.

The proposal was made by letter of the American Federation of Scientists to UN Secretary General Trygve Lie, by Dr. Arthur Roberts, physicist at the State University of Iowa and chairman of the federation's administrative committee.

Admitting that such activity by the U. N. might modify "some of the viewpoints regarding (atomic energy) control," presently deadlocked in U. N. deliberations, Dr. Roberts concluded "very little can be lost by initiating such a program, and there is much to be gained."

At present, United States distributes isotopes to many nations but such distribution, Dr. Roberts pointed out, "raises new international problems . . . of licensing, health protection, standards of measurement, distribution procedures, nomenclature, and prices of the isotopes."

At Science Meeting

Improved Forecasting To Be Topic

Possibilities of improved weather forecasting by making more accurate observations in the Southern Hemisphere and from greater atmospheric heights will be discussed by Dr. Harry Wexler of the United States Weather Bureau at a meeting of the American Meteorlogical Society.

American Phytopathological Society, concluding sessions of sixth annual meeting in Plant Industry Building, Beltsville, Md.

Friday

Association of American Geographers, 8 p. m., in National Archives Building Auditorium, 8th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Business meeting and informal reception for Dr. Richard Hartshorne, national president of the Geographers Association.

Taft Advocates Increase in Social Security

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 20 (U.P.)—Senator Robert A. Taft said today that Social Security should be increased to assure every citizen 65 years of age and over a living wage.

The Ohio Republican, speaking on the Columbus town meeing radio forum, discussed "How Far Should We Go in Social Welfare?" with Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.).

Taft, leader of the Republican opposition in the Senate, said the present "old age insurance program is woefully inadequate and should be completely revamped."

Sparkman agreed with Taft and said the present average payments under Social Security come to about $26 a month.

Group Blood Gift Marks Brotherhood Week

Fifteen members of John and Bernard Wilner Post 381, Jewish War Veterans, marked the start of Brotherhood Week yesterday, not with speeches and resolutions, but with an act of service to the community.

They gathered at the District Red Cross blood bank, 1730 E st. nw. Each gave a pint of blood in observance of the week sponsored by the Nation Conference of Christians and Jews in the interests of understanding among racial and religious groups.

Brotherhood Week also was emphasized yesterday by special sermons in several Washington churches. On a national radio program broadcast here by WTOP, the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul were awarded the first Brotherhood Week national award, for improvement in intergroup relations there. It was presented by Nelson Rockefeller, national chairman of the week's observance.

The principal observance by the National Conference this week in Washington, where Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is chairman, will be a program at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution ave., between 12th and 14th sts. nw.

Dr. Seth Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church and cochairman of the churches and synagogues committee for the observance, will be the speaker.

Today, Alexander Campbell, assistant to the Attorney General, will present to station WWDC a National Conference Brotherhood Award at the annual Brotherhood Week meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington, scheduled for 12:30 p. m. in the Statler Hotel.

Other Brotherhood Week programs include:

Tuesday, 7:30 p. m.—Showing of film, "Don't Be a Sucker," at YWCA, 7th and K sts. nw.

Wednesday, 2:30 p. m.—Clare Boothe Luce and Gilbert Harrison, national chairman, American Veterans Committee, will speak at a luncheon meeting of Women's Activities Committee, NCCJ at Hotel 2400.

The Campaign to Save

WOODLAWN

We have $95,000 now available from donations

But if we get $38,000 more from the public

We will then have $170,000 the entire purchase price

Why? Because the Old Dominion Foundation has found our project worthy, and has agreed to provide the difference—if we can get $38,000 more in public donations.

We have faith that George Washington's ghost, so to speak, will somehow inspire the public contributions which are still necessary. As a result we have decided to be bold.

On Washington's Birthday, Tuesday, at noon, therefore, we shall buy Woodlawn and take possession. There will be a simple ceremony in keeping with the Alexandria-Fairfax tradition, to which all friends are invited. Watch newspapers for details.

Today we plan to negotiate temporary loans until our $38,000 added public contributions are received.

We need every dollar available.

AMERICAN FAMILY CLOSE-UP
As they go, so goes the nation!

How Bob Norris made the job he couldn't find

● It happened only three months after Robert and Marguerite Norris were married! Bob suffered an accident that changed his whole life. He could no longer do active jobs he knew; he lacked the training for any other! Big odds against Bob—but he refused to be beaten . . .

While Marguerite's job as movie theatre cashier helped keep things going, Bob set out to fit himself for a new job.

After six years of teaching himself accounting, Bob got his first break! He started in a $7-a-week part-time bookkeeping job. Little enough, but it gave him the chance to prove he could work as well as the next man. Meanwhile, he continued his studies at night. Finally he was qualified to hang out his shingle as a public accountant. But could he actually make all his studying pay off . . . ?

To help make ends meet after Bob started out for himself, Marguerite kept a firm hand on expenses. By careful buying, housekeeping, home canning, she still feeds family on only $700 a year. Clothes take $250, taxes on house, $60 a year.

Learning to save for things they want starts young in the Norris family! Albert William, 4, bought a train that way. His dad saved up to buy a car; mother put money aside regularly so that Cora Nancy could have music lessons.

"Even then it took midnight oil and teamwork managing our money to get over those tough years," say the Norrises.

Town teen center is a big interest for both the Norrises. They also teach church school, work for Clarksville recreation drive. And outdoors fun is in their picture too. Bob's job still gives him time for hunting and fishing.

Today the business Bob Norris made for himself provides an income of $6000 a year. But the family still manages their money with care. Making dresses is one way Marguerite helps build up savings for their big goals.

"But life insurance is our most important savings plan," Bob says. He now has a program of planned life insurance protection. It's budgeted at $29.49 a month. For the future he's working with his agent on a retirement program.

What's the secret of Bob's ability to beat the big odds he faced 16 years ago? "If you want to get yourself ahead," he says, "you can!"

Bob has plans for Albert William: Harvard, Class of '65! And Bob himself wants to study for a law degree. "Study pays off," he says.

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

The Norrises, like other American families, prove to all of us that the only way we really solve our problems is by our own efforts!

These stories of real families much like yours also show how much more success, how much more happiness is possible when you have peace of mind . . . the sort of peace of mind that comes from wise management of money now, and from knowing that future security has been adequately provided for.

The Life Insurance Companies and their Agents bring you these American family close-ups because what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

Core Of American Policy

The poll of Senators conducted by The Washington Post indicates that there has been a great deal of misleading talk about the proposed Atlantic Pact. What this poll shows is that the Senate would vote overwhelmingly for war if Russia should aggressively invade Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg or Canada. Fifty Senators said they would vote for war in such circumstances, although some added qualifications; only one said he would vote against fighting to defend the countries to be included in the Atlantic Pact. In this striking manifestation of sentiment for making common cause with western Europe in resisting totalitarian aggression is to be found the real substance of American policy.

To be sure, some members of the Senate have proved unreasonably timorous about participation in the poll and about entering into long-range commitments for joint defense. But nothing that has been either said or done alters the fact that the United States is at present strongly disposed to stand with other democratic powers against possible Soviet aggression. The sentiment behind this political policy appears to be even stronger than the support for the policy of fostering economic recovery in Europe. It would be a tragic error on the part of Europe to mistake the American distaste for military alliances of the old-fashioned type for a return of isolationism. With or without the proposed treaty, we are confident that the United States would, as a matter of self-preservation, spring to the defense of any part of western Europe invaded by Soviet forces.

It must not be forgotten that, so long as our troops occupy Germany, the United States is in effect a European power. We have obligations and interests on that continent that would compel us to resist any act that might be regarded as the beginning of a westward-moving Soviet conquest. This basic fact has been in no wise changed by the disagreements about the wording of the proposed Atlantic Pact. These disagreements appear to be on a quite different plane. They involve reconciliation of the pact not only with the United States Constitution (which we think can be accomplished without difficulty) but also with the Charter of the United Nations.

A security pact that is to endure for many years cannot be drawn with only one situation in mind, but must be shaped to any contingency that may arise in the future. It must necessarily leave the door open to investigation, deliberation and common action in accord with the dictates of justice. That is the formula prescribed in the United Nations Charter. It cannot be overthrown by any regional pact without imperiling the long-run outlook for peace. What seems to us to be needed is an Atlantic Pact that will recognize the determination of the United States to resist any aggressive invasion of western Europe and assure our allies in defense that we mean business under our U. N. obligations even while the Security Council remains hamstrung.

Peppery

Senator Pepper's denunciation of the National Association of Manufacturers as an enemy of democracy and a symbol of reactionary business forces was provoked by the testimony of Ira Mosher, an NAM representative, who appeared before the Senate Labor Committee to oppose the Administration's labor bill. Adding insult to injury, Mr. Pepper declared that "it was the workers' sons who died on the battlefields and the manufacturers' sons by and large who stayed at home and made the profits out of war." This latter utterly unfounded charge boomeranged, since it brought out the fact that the witness had lost several close relatives in the recent war.

However, the truth or falsity of Mr. Pepper's charges has no bearing on the issue raised by his harsh treatment of a witness voluntarily appearing to testify on proposed legislation. All too often members of congressional committees abuse the privilege of interrogation by impugning the motives of witnesses or treating them as if they were criminals, haled before the bar of justice. By following this technique Mr. Pepper put obstacles in the way of proper functioning of the legislative process at a vital stage of development. For a careful weighing of all the controversial issues involved in the drafting of complex legislation is essential if that legislation is to be well balanced and fair to all the interested parties.

Committee hearings are worthless unless they afford opportunity of airing diverse views, with witnesses encouraged to express their opinions freely. If committee rooms are used as sounding boards for broadcasting the preconceived opinions of committee members, or if committee members try to browbeat witnesses who do not agree with them, hearings might as well be abandoned.

Recovery, Not Relief

By far the most important task confronting ECA is to persaude Congress and the American people to recapture and effectuate the vision and meaning of the Marshall Plan. A locust crowd of lobbyists is trying to devour whatever sense the program may contain. They are agents of the coal mining industry shipping and marine insurance companies, manufacturers of machine tools, tires and automobiles, and other producers —all have come to Washington to plead for more generous allotments of ECA dollars to finance shipments of their products or to pay for their services. If these petitioners had their way, ECA funds that otherwise would be available to build up European industries would have to be spent on American automobiles, machinery and equipment and used to subsidize American shipping. Unless this drive to force ECA to provide larger export outlets for American goods and American services is arrested, the recovery program will soon degenerate into an outright relief program. Participating countries would then be compelled to use ECA allotments to buy products needed to expand their own industries and speed recovery.

It is reported on reliable authority that Administrator Hoffman intends to issue a statement next Monday pointing out that the ECA was established for the express purpose of helping other countries to increase their productive capacity, not to create markets for American goods. A timely warning of this kind is greatly needed, not only to apprise the public of the present threat to the integrity of the ECA but to remind certain members of Congress that they are endangering the recovery program by sponsoring demands of special interest groups for a larger share of ECA funds. The Washington Post hopes that Mr. Hoffman will register a vigorous protest against the destructive activities of the lobbyists. They have forgotten, if they ever knew, that the purpose of ECA is to foster economic recovery abroad, not to subsidize domestic exporting industries; to wind up Operation Rathole, not to perpetuate it; to put Europe on its feet, not in the American pocket; to promote self-reliance, not chronic mendicancy. It would be scandalous if Congress were to yield to importunings which would justify Russian criticism and encourage those self-complacent Europeans who have been saying all along that the Marshall Plan was merely a device to get rid of American surpluses.

Pensions For Veterans

Representative Rankin's resolve to force a vote on his veterans' pension bill under the new ruling designed to dislodge bills bottled up in the Rules Committee, has alarmed House leaders. They are said to have discovered a loophole in the ruling that may enable them to avoid a showdown on the proposal. Their attitude is a tacit admission that a large number of Congressmen lack the courage to turn down a pension grab, however, outrageous it may be. Under the circumstances, the best protection against its enactment appears to lie in a vigorous campaign to build up an informed opposition to it inside and outside Congress.

The President has already launched the educational campaign by reminding the Veterans of Foreign Wars that they have an obligation to assist their Government in "maintaining the solvency that is necessary for its continuance." This veiled reference to the great cost of the Rankin plan (according to some estimates it would total six billion dollars a year at peak levels) is only one of the strong arguments for its rejection. The Veterans' Administration states that last June there were 18.8 million veterans in this country, nearly 15 million of whom served in World War II, and the number is still increasing. These veterans and their families constitute a very considerable proportion of the entire population. Hence, the veterans themselves, as taxpayers, would have to defray a very substantial part of the cost of the proposed pension system.

Furthermore, taxpayers are already financing a varied and exceptionally generous system of pensions for disabled veterans, providing medical care for veterans and funds for their education and rehabilitation. The Government has, in short, done all that it can reasonably be expected to do, and much more than it ever did in the past, to aid physically handicapped veterans and assist the able-bodied to equip themselves for reentry into civilian life. Finally, and possibly the most decisive of all arguments against pensions for all veterans, is the fact that the Administration plans a comprehensive expansion of the existing system of old-age insurance together with an increase of benefits.

If the Rankin bill were to be enacted, would veterans receive monthly pensions of $90, paid for by the Government, in addition to pensions of varying amounts financed by contributions from employers and employes? Or would the veterans be in a class apart, excluded from participation in the general contributory insurance system? In any case, is there any sound reason for special treatment of a large section of the population? Certainly such discrimination could not be defended on the ground that aged veterans are in greater need of pensions than other people, or that employed veterans are any less able to contribute to a pension or insurance fund than nonveteran fellow workers.

The Ways and Means Committee plans to open hearings on the social security program at the end of this month, well in advance of the date when Representative Rankin expects to bring his bill before the House. We trust that those hearings will advertise the fact that under a comprehensive system of old-age insurance there will be no need and no justification whatever for setting up a separate pension system for veterans.

Housing For Millions

Whatever his other attributes, no one can say that Walter Reuther is not provocative in the realm of ideas. Relating the housing problem to defense, the United Auto Workers' president has come forward with a scheme to use idle aircraft plant capacity for the construction of 20 million low-cost prefabricated houses. If his plan is short on methods of practical implementation, it at least is sparked by the broad imagination necessary to get more housing for the people who need it.

It was Mr. Reuther, readers may recall, who before American entry into the war suggested that excess automobile manufacturing capacity could be used to make more airplanes. Mr. Reuther's plan was at once mired in a bog of reasons why it couldn't be done. But before the war was very old, Reuther was vindicated, auto plants were making airplanes, and a lot of people were asking themselves why there had been so much red tape.

Unused capacity is characteristic of the aircraft industry today. Plane production almost collapsed after the war, and even now contemplated military purchases for the next fiscal year are below the minimum figure adjudged necessary to keep the industry healthy. There is no essential reason why some of this capacity could not be adapted to the assembly-line production of prefabricated houses and at the same time kept available for rapid reconversion. Prefabs have long since proved their practicability. Even mail-order firms are selling them.

Many of the details of the Reuther proposal are, of course, open to question. It would be a great pity if his scheme were to injure the program for public housing now before Congress. The two plans are aimed at different problems, and it is obvious that the Reuther plan would not benefit many families in low-income brackets in need of housing assistance. It may be doubted whether the $6000 price for a two-bedroom home, envisaged by Mr. Reuther, would hold by the time land were purchased and the home assembled. Certainly the program ought to give private firms the maximum opportunity to participate, as Reuther indicates, and the Government's part ought to be restricted to loans to start the projects. Obviously, large funds would be necessary, though if the Reuther plan worked the loans would be self-liquidating through purchases. Then there is the problem of archaic building codes which discriminate against prefabricated housing, as well as the resistance of building-trade unions—obstacles which would have to be surmounted before the plan could take effect.

There are many families in need of housing today that can neither qualify for public housing nor afford the high-priced homes now being built. Whether or not the Reuther plan would meet this need, and whether or not it is practicable as to numbers, financing and cooperation with industry, he has done a service in proposing it. For big problems are never solved by small ideas.

Credit Controls

In urging extension of the Reserve Board's power to control consumer credit and to require banks to hold extra reserves, Chairman McCabe warned the Joint Committee on the Economic Report that if the authority to increase reserve requirements is permitted to lapse next June about two billion dollars of reserves would be released and become the basis for a manifold credit expansion. Of course it does not follow that any great volume of credit expansion would result; but it might. In any case, it would be folly to deprive the board of this weapon of credit control and open the door to such an expansion.

At all times the board should be in a position to use its powers either to restrain an undesired credit expansion or to prevent excessive credit contraction. For that reason this newspaper has consistently supported requests for legislative authorization of permanent control over consumer credit. When the necessity for such controls no longer exists, they can be modified or lifted. Similarly, if and when economic conditions call for relaxation of other forms of credit control, such as present high reserve requirements, the board can take appropriate action.

For Congress to hamper the efficiency of the Reserve Board's credit control mechanism merely because of fear that it may be used to tighten credit at the wrong time is as shortsighted as it would be to deprive the board of the powers it now possesses to supply the banks with additional reserves in case of need. If the Reserve Board is the trustworthy agency it is generally considered to be, it should be allowed to decide when and how to act instead of having its discretionary powers curtailed because of congressional timidity.

ENCOUNTER AT MOONRISE

As I went 'round by Raven Hill,
The full moon rising frosty-keen,
I met a stranger standing still,
Some stony stubble-aisles between.

I thought him flesh, a mortal man;
But I discovered very soon
He was not mortal. I began
To whistle an uncertain tune.

His shadow shivered on the ground,
But more than windy rags was he.
I walked and whistled wide around,
Not turning toward the moon to see
What might come hobbling after me.

Loyalty Revision

May I call your attention to an error which appeared on page 7 of your issue of February 17, with respect to the general position taken in the summary report by individuals attending the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties on the subject of loyalty investigation?

As your story indicated, the meeting expressed opposition to the continuation of the loyalty program for all Federal employes in its present form, at the same time recognizing the propriety of loyalty checks for employes in positions genuinely affecting the national security, if such checks are made according to traditional procedures of fair trial.

While the proposal was discussed, the group did not reach agreement that dismissal under a limited program of this type should be based only on "overt acts." The report of the sense of the meeting said "We firmly believe that the procedures by which loyalty of such employes is determined must conform to basic and time-tested procedures of fair trial, including specifically the right of cross-examination, confrontation of witnesses, and an impartial inquiry."

"Cargo For Children"

Since VE-Day, the remnant of Jews left in central Europe has been succored by several organizations, among them the Workmen's Circle. To help some of the thousands of children orphaned by total war, the Workmen's Circle has established and supports homes in Europe and in Israel, where the child victims of genocide may be sheltered and fed, and perhaps in time, be enabled to resume the normal and happy activities of childhood.

On March 19, the Workmen's Circle plans to send a shipload of clothing, food, toys and medicines to the children in some 19 homes in Europe and Israel. February 20 to 28 is the culminating week of our public drive for "Cargo for Children."

Readers interested in contributing to the "cargo" may communicate with Mr. H. Winik, Taylor 9228, to arrange for pick-up of contributions.

"Medaling"

Your editorial February 12 regarding Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan might better have been entitled "Meddling," meaning meddling by a stupid, anonymous writer.

It is only logical to assume that the Argentine government would not offer such a decoration without consultation with the State Department. Why should the Argentine government risk the international embarrassment of having General Vaughan refuse the medal?

If the State Department recommended to the White House that General Vaughan should accept the medal, then the general was in no different position from the traffic cop who gives you a ticket—he was doing his duty.

If the acceptance of these medals is a matter of custom, and the State Department was not consulted, certainly there was time enough between the announcement and the presentation for the State Department to advise the White House if the medal should not have been accepted.

It seems clear that The Washington Post owes General Vaughan a public apology.

Hungarian Estates

In all the publicity on the Mindszenty case, there is not a word on the basic fact that the real fight is feudalism versus land reform.

We find no statement that, previous to the 1945 elections, some 3000 estates totaling more than 9 million acres, were owned by Hungarian noble families, the unoccupied throne, and the Roman Catholic orders; no statement that some 19 million acres were divided among 2,500,000 peasants owning less than 50 acres apiece from which to scratch their living.

Fully one third of Hungary's tillable land was held in parcels ranging from 2500 acres to 30,000 acres, which in America would mean one third of the agricultural land in the hands of 3500 persons.

Out of 25 of the largest estates, reported in 1946 by a Western authority, the smallest of these totaled more than 45,000 acres. To quote this authority, "The remainder of the 350 top estates, continue in roughly the same general divisions among aristocrats, the royal family, the princes of the church. It was perhaps not surprising that Archbishop Joseph Mindszenty issued a pastoral letter (previous to) in regard to the elections. The pastoral letter includes a warning against the vindictive nature of Hungary's new land reform legislation."

Rights And Segregation

The February 14 letter by C. L. Chapin presents the fact that our Constitution did not originally provide for freeing the slaves as an argument that democratic principles need not mean the end of racial segregation.

Our Constitution was not written as a "charter of democracy," but as a working compromise among sharply conflicting interests. In fact, many persons of democratic principles were so greatly disappointed by it, and (both before and after it became effective in March, 1789) made such an outcry because it failed to protect basic rights that the amendments popularly known as a Bill of Rights were ratified as of December, 1791.

The very men who made the Constitution recognized the status of the slaves as incompatible with democratic principles. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments were not adopted "to punish and humiliate the defeated South," but to keep the freedmen from being quite politically helpless.

Finally, to say that our Constitution did or could express the whole meaning of democratic principles is a complete misinterpretation of the significance of principles. All principles are expressed very imperfectly in institutions; hence the institutions must be corrected from time to time if the principles are valid. Our Constitution recognized this fact by providing for its own amendment. As a people, we have enough social enlightenment today, to know that unless we institutionalize the equality of all mankind (and nonsegregation is but one stone in the edifice), we shall never achieve democracy.

"Columbia Valley"

In your "Columbia Valley" editorial of January 27 is the following statement:

"Aside from the die-hard opponents of public power in the Pacific Northwest, there seems to be considerable agreement on the general objective of river development."

The editorial then goes on to give a reserved indorsement of some type of Columbia Valley Authority.

It is easy to understand why a writer 3000 miles from the Pacific Northwest should, by reverse reasoning, fall into the false assumption that opposition to a CVA stems from those opposed to public power. When the principal proponents of a CVA are public ownership advocates, it might seem logical to conclude that the opposition to a CVA comes from those who believe in private power.

The fact is, however, that the opposition to TVA type of control over this region is far wider and deeper than any argument about power. It extends all the way from the State capitols to the grass roots. The people of the Pacific Northwest recognize how narrow is the margin between a benign and a malignant dictatorship over the life of the region. They believe in working out the answers to their problems through the tested processes of representative government. It may take a little longer sometimes, but that is a small price to pay for the preservation of democracy.

There is no controversy in the region as to the propriety of multiple-purpose river development by the Federal Government. Private power companies of the Pacific Northwest have joined with public power agencies in urging speedy construction of needed projects. All the private companies ask is that they be treated fairly in the distribution of Federal power, so that members of the public who choose to be served by a private power system are not discriminated against.

Great progress has been made in the region toward the coordination of river developments as a result of effective work by the existing interagency committee. Comprehensive studies have been made by the existing Federal agencies, and these studies are being used as a guide to orderly development of the Columbia River system.

There are some, of course, who don't want to give our present method of Government a chance to work. A few impatient ones want to try shortcuts, without thinking through the implications of their proposals. Others are under the illusion that the way to make Government more efficient is to give it more power over the people.

We think the answer is to work actively and constructively with already established agencies, within the framework of the representative system of Government.

Secretary-Manager, Pacific Northwest Development Association.

BURKE'S POLITICS: Selected writings and speeches of Edmund Burke on Reform, Revolution and War; edited by Ross J. S. Hoffman and Paul Levack. (Knopf, $4.75.)

More than sixty years ago the eminent barrister, Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, observed of Burke that he had become one of those writers who are quoted by almost everybody and read by almost none. The truth is that even the best intentioned modern reader finds him difficult to take in more than moderate doses. The epithets most frequently applied to Burke's thought and to his manner of expressing it are "elevated," "noble," and so on. We have lost our taste for the grand manner in English prose, which is perhaps as well, for there are precious few in any generation who are capable of managing it. I have always believed that the pedagogues who corrupted the innocence of youth by holding up writers like Burke, Gibbon and Macaulay as models for literary emulation were responsible for a good deal of the bad rhetoric with which the English-speaking world has been afflicted; although perhaps we should also remember the observation of the late G. K. Chesterton, defending the prose extravagances of Scott, that the man who is fearful of bombast is not likely to achieve eloquence. There is indeed very little in Burke that could be called pure bombast and much that is pure eloquence, and a good deal more that is sententious and profound. The tortuous syntax and billowing periods that are so unnatural in his imitators were natural enough to him. He was born, so to speak, to the purple, and that is precisely what makes him so dangerous to an impressionable ear.

But Burke is not only a large figure in English literature; he is also one of the great political philosophers, and unique, as Stephen reminds us, in having achieved his reputation in both fields with the same set of writings. Indeed, with the exception of the celebrated Inquiry into the Origin of our Ideas of the Sublime and the Beautiful, all the important writings of Burke are upon political subjects. It is as a political thinker that he is presented to us by the Messrs. Hoffman and Levack. They believe that he has necessarily much to say to an age as intensely political as ours; and the plan followed in their condensations and arrangements from his works has been to include whatever seems relevant to the present crisis in state and society, eliminating what concerns causes and questions no longer deemed vital. However, as they observe, Burke's philosophy of politics was not a set of abstract formulas, but was developed wholly in reference to concrete problems. It has been called a philsophy of expediency, and it might also with some justice be called pragmatist. "The practical consequences of any political tenet, he wrote in the Appeal From the New to the Old Whigs, "go a great way in deciding upon its value. Political problems do not primarily concern truth or falsehood. They relate to good or evil. What in the result is likely to produce evil is politically false; that which is productive of good, politically true." Institutions arise and are developed in response to permanent needs within the society, and are necessarily the products of long growth and modification, therefore, must be made upon the basis of existing institutions, for to overturn them is to destroy all possibility of freedom and civil order. Burke, then, was a conservative, in the strict sense of the word, whose vision of politics was historical, and who at almost every point in his arguments sought support from precedents.

A great deal has been made of the contrast between Burke's defense of the American revolutionists in their conflict with the Crown, and his bitter antagonism to the French revolutionaries; he is sometimes cited as an example of the radical whose radicalism vanishes with his youth. This, however, is a superficial view which few who have taken the trouble to acquaint themselves with his principles have accepted. The one virtue upon which he prided himself was consistency, and nearly all students of his work and behavior are agreed that he was, if anything, too consistent; the complaint of his critics is that he applied identical principles to utterly disparate circumstances. Burke defended the American colonists, partly because he believed the British Constitution applied to British dominions, partly because he believed history had shown the futility of seeking to extinguish the spirit of liberty by military force; it was not because he accepted the theories of social compact and natural rights whereby the more extreme revolutionists justified their conduct. In the French Revolution, however, Burke perceived the subversion of the whole European order which he believed to have arisen on the ruins of the Roman Empire and to be essentially the same in all countries. "All Europe," he insisted is virtually one great state, having the same basis of general law with some diversity of provincial customs and local establishments." He seems to have believed, with Pascal, that equity proceeds from custom, and that a veneration of established institutions is necessary to justice and liberty.

Since this is so, it is also necessary to accept the theoretic premises upon which the institutions are based. Thus by a characteristic backward, pragmatical reasoning, Burke becomes the champion of natural law and of the religious authority with which it is invested. And so the whole concept of human rights, he tells us, rests upon belief in God.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Off And On The Record

THERE ARE many nice questions of journalistic ethics in the fracas which has followed Secretary Royall's off-the-record press conference at the American Embassy in Tokyo two weeks ago.

Lippmann

About what he did say there is some, but not much, dispute. The correspondent of the United Press understood him to say that he had "grave doubts" whether in the event of war "it would be worthwhile" to "hold" Japan and to undertake "the task of feeding eighty million civilians." The correspondent of the Associated Press states that Mr. Royall gave no "indication . . . that the United States intended to withdraw from Japan," but then went on to report that "what he did say merely raised this fundamental question: Is the United States obligated to defend Japan? The Secretary answered negatively in expressing his opinion. General Douglas MacArthur has said 'yes'."

Although there is no substantial difference between these two versions, Secretary Royall is quite within his rights in issuing a denial. It is the rule of the game that an official cannot be held publicly responsible for remarks made off-the-record. He is entitled to repudiate his remarks even if he made them, even indeed if he agreed off-the-record that they could be used without attribution to him. A correspondent who attends an off-the-record press conference knows that in return for what he gets, he must pay a price—he must take the risk of having his story denied. This is the rule of the game which, like most human arrangements, has its advantages and its disadvantages.

I once heard the rule expounded by Theodore Roosevelt to whom I had been sent by my editor with instructions to ask him whether some charges against a certain Senator were true. "They are true," he said, "and he is in fact an unmitigated scoundrel." Then he took me by the shoulder, fixed me in the eye and added: "But young man, if you ever breathe a word of what I have just told you, I'll call you a liar." I crept back to my editor feeling as if I had bought a tiger in a pet shop.

THE ROYALL incident—leaving the journalistic aspect of it aside—points up the hardest and the least clarified problem of our foreign policy. There is no dispute, for it is a matter of record, that General MacArthur has asked for reinforcements and that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have had to say no.

They have had and are having to say no, or something very like it, to many similar requests—to those who argue that we must hold on strongly in Korea, to those who wanted to give Chiang Kai-shek strong military support, to intimations that southeast Asia is threatened and must be strengthened, that Iran is threatened, that Greece needs still more military aid, that the Berlin airlift needs to be enlarged, and most recently that Norway needs to be reinforced. All of these claims are in addition to the project of rearming western Europe under the Atlantic Pact.

WE HAVE here, in the concrete and no longer in the form of diplomatic rhetoric, the test of the famous policy of containment, otherwise known as the Truman Doctrine. As stated two years ago by Mr. Truman "it must be the policy of the United States to support free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or outside pressure." As understood by General MacArthur and the Japanese, by Chiang Kai-shek and Congressman Judd, by the Greek government, the western Germans, the peoples of western Berlin, Mr. Lange of Norway, by the Dutch, the Belgians, and the French, this is an American commitment to defend them, to create the equivalent of a Maginot Line for them, to give them an automatic guaranty that American force would be available on their frontiers to contain the Russians.

That has never been the view of the American Chiefs of Staff. They have known that it was an absurdity to suppose that adequate local force could be developed on the whole vast periphery of the Soviet Union in Europe, the Middle East and Asia. To attempt that would be like sending three policemen to surround a building that has 25 exits. They have known always that a power like Russia cannot, if it wishes to make war, be contained by local defenses—that it can only be held in check by the deterrent power of the over-all force of the United States.

DURING the two years of the Truman Doctrine there has, therefore, always been a deep contradiction between American strategical planning and American diplomatic planning. Mr. Lange, relying on our diplomatic declarations, was quite right in coming to Washington to find out—not whether the United States would go to war if Norway were attacked but—whether the United States could and would defend Norway against invasion. This is also the issue between General MacArthur and Secretary Royall. It is not whether the United States will go to war if Japan is attacked. It is whether in case of war Japan is to become another Bataan.

That is what really interests the French, the Belgians, the Dutch, and also the western Germans, and the western Berliners. We are misapprehending the realities altogether if we spend time arguing whether the United States will go to war if the Soviet Union goes to war. Nobody in his senses thinks we would not go to war. What the Europeans want to know is not whether we shall go to war "automatically." They want to know whether we can defend them successfully if we are unable to prevent a war. Just as General MacArthur does not want to be in another Bataan, so they do not wish to be in another Dunkirk.

THAT IS why the real issues, as they become concrete, become so much sharper. That is why Mr. Acheson is entering upon a period when major decisions of high policy will have to be taken—in conjunction with General Eisenhower. Mr. Acheson is not able merely to carry on and administer as a going concern a policy laid down for him by his predecessors. For that policy is coming apart at the seams from Korea to Norway, from China to Greece, from Tokyo to Berlin.

"Keep ringing—I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they knew we were here!"

Text of Address by Pope

Vatican City, Feb. 20 (AP).—The text of Pope Pius' address to Rome Catholics today, in an unofficial translation:

ROMANS, beloved sons and daughters:

Once again, in a grave and grievous hour, the faithful people of the Eternal City has hastened to its Bishop and Father. Once again, this superb colonnade seems barely able to clasp with its gigantic arms the multitude that, like waves moved by an irresistible force, are washed up to the threshold of the Vatican basilica to attend the mass of expiation, in the central point of the whole Catholic world, and to pour out the sentiments with which their souls overflow. The sentence imposed—amidst the unanimous condemnation of the civilized world—on the banks of the Danube on an eminent Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church has stirred on the banks of the Tiber a cry of indignation worthy of the city.

But the fact that a regime adverse to religion has this time smitten a prince of the Church venerated by the overwhelming majority of his people, is not an isolated case. It is one of the links of the long chain of persecutions which some dictatorial states are pursuing against Christian doctrine and life.

A common characteristic of the persecutors of all times is that, not content with crushing their victims physically, they seek further to render them despicable and hateful to the fatherland and to society. Who does not remember the Roman martyrs of whom Tacitus speaks, sacrificed under Nero and depicted as incendiaries, abominable evildoers, enemies of the human kind? (Ann. 15, 44.)

The modern persecutors show themselves docile pupils of that inglorious school. They copy, so to speak, their masters and models, and even surpass them in cruelty, skillful as they are in the art of employing the most recent advances of science and technique to the end of a domination and an enslavement of the people such as would have been inconceivable in the past times.

ROMANS, the Church of Christ follows the path marked out by the Divine Redeemer. She knows herself eternal; she knows that she cannot perish; that the most violent tempests will not avail to submerge her; she does not beg favors. The threats and the injuries of terrestial powers do not intimidate her. She does not meddle in problems purely political and economic nor does she deign to pass judgment upon the usefulness or the harm of one form of government or another. Her supreme premise, always eager insofar as enjoying peace with all, depends upon her (Rom. 12, 18): She gives to Caesar that which is rightfully Caesar's, but cannot betray or abandon that which is God's.

Now it is well known what the totalitarian and antireligious state demands and expects of her as the price of its tolerance and problematical recognition. It would like a church silent when it should speak, a church that would dim the light of God, adapting it to the desires of human wills when she should loudly proclaim it and defend it; a church that detaches herself from the firm foundation on which Christ has raised her to set herself down on the shifting sand of opinions of the day and abandon herself to the current (of opinion) of the moment; a church that does not resist oppression of the conscience and does not watch over the legitimate rights and the just liberty of the people; a church that, with indecorous servility, remains a church only within the four walls of the temple, forgetting the Divine mandate received from Christ: Go ye into the crossroad (Matt. 22, 9) and teach the people (Matt. 28, 19).

Beloved sons and daughters, spiritual heirs of the innumerable legions of confessors and martyrs: is this perhaps the church you love and venerate? (A great shout from the crowd: "No.")

Do you recognize, perhaps, in such a church the lineaments of the face of your mother? (Another shout from the crowd: "No.") Can you imagine a successor to St. Peter who would bow to such demands? (Another shout of "No.")

THE POPE, by divine premise, is, even in his human weakness, invincible and unshakable, herald of truth and justice and the principle of the unity of the church. His voice denounces errors, idolatries, superstitutions, condemns iniquity, makes charity and virtue to be loved.

Can he, then, be silent when in a nation there are torn from the center of Christianity in Rome, with violence and cunning, the churches which are united to her, when there are imprisoned all the Greek-Catholic bishops because they refused to apostate their faith, when the clergy and the faithful are persecuted and arrested because they refuse to be separated from their true mother church? (The crowd again cried "No.")

Can the Pope be silent when the right to educate the very children is taken from the parents by a minority regime, that would like to separate them from Christ?

Can the Pope be silent when the state, exceeding the limits of its competence, arrogates to itself the power of suppressing dioceses, of deposing bishops, of upsetting the ecclesiastic organization and reducing it below the minimum requirements for efficacious care of souls?

Can the Pope be silent when the point is reached of punishing with imprisonment a priest guilty of not being willing to violate the most inviolable and sacred of secrets, the secret of sacramental confession?

IS ALL this perhaps an illegitimate interference with the political powers of the state? Who could honestly say so? (The crowd applauded at length.

Your acclamations have already given an answer to these and many other questions.

May God, our Lord, reward you for your faith, beloved sons and daughters. May He give you the strength for present and future struggles. May He make you vigilant against the blows of His and your enemies. May He brighten with His light the mind of those whose eyes are still closed to the truth. May He concede to the many hearts still far from Him, the grace of sincere return to that faith and brotherly sentiments, whose denial threatens the peace of humanity.

And now let our apostolic benediction, wide, paternal, and affectionate, descend upon the city and the world.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Chink In The Curtain

BERLIN.—Berliners nowadays talk about the airlift as people elsewhere talk about the weather. On a fine morning they will say, not "what a beautiful day," but "there will be many planes today. Yet this perpetual consciousness of the roar of the big C-54s overhead is actually the only abnormal note in the life of the city. The world still thinks of the Berlin situation as dangerous and critical. In fact, it has become an uneventful stalemate.

There is not the slightest danger, moreover, that the stalemate will be broken, either by Russian aggression or by the failure of the airlift to do its job. This spring, as the weather improves, airlift input will increase to about 8000 tons a day. Gen. Lucius D. Clay already has plans to increase the airlift this summer to a year-round average of 10,000 tons a day. And if the Russians fail to lift their blockade this spring, Clay's plans will be put into effect.

With 10,000 tons a day, the western sectors of Berlin can live a perfectly normal life. Even now, with much lower tonnages, the people of west Berlin are eating a little better and finding consumer goods a little more available than before the blockade. As for their spirit, it has already been tested.

THE BERLINERS showed their spirit when 86 per cent of them defied the Soviets by going to the polls and choosing as their mayor, with a huge majority, the veteran anti-Communist Socialist, Ernst Reuter. Reuter was an old bolshevik, and can tell you of the early days after the Russian revolution, when his friend Lenin named him president of the Volga Republic of the Soviet Union. His disillusionment with communism has left him deeply cynical about everything except the value of freedom. Yet there can be few more stout-hearted leaders than this big, wise, sad old man. He is the symbol of the Berliners' will to resist.

These facts have vastly more than local significance, for the simple reason that the Kremlin's program for Germany has been knocked into a cocked hat by their failure to capture Berlin. As every one acknowledges, the German problem is central Europe. And any analysis of the German problem must begin with the fact that the Kremlin program for Germany has already been frustrated.

The Soviet policy-makers may have vaguely hoped they could use the Berlin blockade as blackmail to disrupt the reconstruction of western Germany and to get their hands on the Ruhr. But their practical, immediate aim was that disclosed in a remarkable speech by Karl Maron, one of their chief political stooges in Germany.

"So long as the forces of reaction can maintain their established positions in Berlin," said Maron, "they will be able to carry out successfully their acts of sabotage. Thus the reconstruction of the western zone will be hampered from the outset."

WHAT MARON MEANT is perfectly clear despite the double talk. So long as Berlin remains a huge chink in the Iron Curtain, it will continue to be impossible to organize the Soviet zone of Germany as a full-fledged Kremlin satellite, and to incorporate this new satellite in the Kremlin's new east European empire. The failure of the Berlin blockade has prevented the establishment of an east German state on these lines.

All the preparations for such a state began to be made long before the blockade itself was declared. An embryonic east German government was organized in the form of the Peoples' Congress. A new east German police force was recruited, with from 30,000 to 40,000 of its 100,000 members formed into paramilitary units commanded by former Wehrmacht generals—the obvious nucleus of a new German army. The Kremlin's political mouthpiece began to play down the theme of Germany unity and to play up the need for a "independent" Sovietized east Germany. The other Soviet satellites began to be pressed to forget their hatred of Germans and to accept east Germany as an equal partner state.

To be sure, the sovietization of east Germany is already outwardly complete. There are all the familiar phenomena of one-party government and omnipresent secret police. The whole region pays tribute to Moscow, and the most important industries are actually Soviet-owned. In the uranium mines of the Erzegebirge, the east zone even has its own gigantic, hideous slave-labor camps.

NONE THE LESS, the real job cannot be done in the present circumstances. Really efficient total ruthlessness is impossible, so long as Berlin remains a chink in the curtain. Thus the failure of the blockade has actually driven the Soviets to increase east zone rations by returning some pillaged wheat to Germany. And worst of all, so long as Berlin remains a free refuge, a dependable German secret police and German army, on the model used in the other satellites, are also impossibilities. The unreliability of the new east zone police is already notorious.

In the circumstances, it is not surprising that Soviet policy in Germany has recently shown every mark of confusion and dissension, even including of a bitter row between Marshal Sokolovsky's political advisers, Ambasador Semeonov, and his liaison with the Russian Communist Party, Colonel Tulpanov. Probably an east German state will be formally proclaimed when the western powers set up their west German government. But as long as Berlin remains free, the proclamation will be meaningless. In fact, it is more important that the wisest Americans here think the establishment of a west German government will be the signal for the Soviets to cut their losses and to terminate the Berlin blockade.

Pope Warns Communists

feels herself eternal. She knows she will not perish, that the most violent storms will not prevail in submerging her. She does not beg for favors. The threats and the disgrace of the earthly powers do not make her timid."

The Pope appeared after Msgr. Luigi Traglia concluded a special outdoor mass of expiation for which the big bell of St. Peter's, the camponone, tolled the hour.

When the tapestries at the balcony's entrance were pulled aside, the audience jammed in the square and streets leading to the Tiber a half-mile away broke into a thunderous, "Long live the Pope."

The ovation lasted for four minutes and when the Pope began, "Romans, beloved sons and daughters . . ." The answering roar lasted another minute.

Seven times he asked the crowd if they wanted the church and the Pope to keep silent, "inclosed within the four walls of the temple." Seven times the crowd shouted "no."

Crowd Gives Answers

In a litany of questions which the crowd answered the Pope asked:

Can the Pope keep silent when the churches united with Rome are torn from her? When bishops, priests and the faithful are persecuted? When a state takes upon itself the right to suppress dioceses, depose bishops, overthrow the ecclesiastic organization?

"Can the Pope keep silent when the point is reached of punishing with imprisonment a priest guilty of having refused to violate the most sacred and inviolate of the secrets, the secrets of the sacramental confession?"

He spoke in Italian, but the Vatican Radio beamed his voice to the world in six languages.

At the end he imparted the special apostolic blessing, "Urbi et Orbi" (to city and world) as thousands knelt on the cobblestones.

All religious orders were represented: White-cassocked Dominicans, the chocolate-brown robes of Franciscans, the deep coffee brown of monks' habits, the black of priests, the red garments of German seminarists. The babble of every language, including Hungarian, could be heard.

From balconies and rooftops in the area could be heard voices joining in the singing. The delayed sound of chant from blocks away rolled into the square like a mountain echo.

Catholic youths held pictures of Cardinal Mindszenty as they shouted, "Viva il Papa."

One 30-foot banner said, "To the Martyr of the Faith—Mindszenty—Glory and Honor."

LONDON and BIRMINGHAM

BRITISH INDUSTRIES FAIR

Britain has long been the world's greatest customer, and has led the way in the export of manufactured products. By initiative in modern research, and from experience of commerce with other nations, her industrial production has become greater and more varied than ever in history.

Renowned for the quality of her work, Britain has applied new technique to her famous industries. By enterprise in fresh markets she has achieved record deliveries, and export production still expands. To keep in touch with these developments great numbers of the world's principal buyers are making visits to Britain.

Every year, from over 100 countries, trade buyers gather at the British Industries Fair. The Chamber of Commerce in Birmingham, and manufacturers from every part of Britain, join with the British Government to welcome them.

At BIF 1949, from 2-13 May, three thousand exhibitors will display the latest developments in thirty groups of allied trades. The leading men of international commerce are invited to attend the world's greatest assembly of national products.

Religious Teaching Hearing Demanded

An Arlington group opposing religious instruction in county public schools yesterday called for a hearing on the issue before the School Board.

The request was made in a letter to Chairman Barnard Joy from William C. Levy, attorney for the Provisional Committee for the Separation of Church and School.

More than 100 Arlington residents gathered in the Clarendon Methodist Church, 6th and N. Irving sts., yesterday to hear the voluntary program praised as "unifying."

In his letter, Levy said, in the committee's opinion, "the program in unconstitutional and we are confident this position will be sustained should a court test become necessary."

The religious instruction issue already has been thrashed out publicly before the School Board by spokesmen on both sides. The board later said it would not alter the present setup.

In the church meeting, Mrs. W. B. Davidson, who heads Arlington's religious teaching program, described it as "nonsectarian and nondenominational."

She declared there are some Jewish children among the 1500 Arlington public school students now enrolled in the voluntary Bible study classes in 18 schools. She said that the Old and New Testaments are the only class texts.

Another speaker, Dr. Minor Miller, executive secretary of the Virginia Council of Churches, said he believes Arlington's program does not violate a recent U. S. Supreme Court decision which banned religious instruction in Champaign, Ill.

In Arlington, Dr. Miller said, the program is nondenominational, not compulsory, and involves no use of public funds, since it is paid for by the Arlington Council of Religious Education.

He called the teaching "a unifying influence," and declared that "we don't want to rear children in the democratic tradition without a knowledge of God."

New School Union Formed In Arlington

Formation of a new union for Arlington school employes was revealed yesterday by Ralph T. Guinther, who said he had been elected chairman.

The group was organized Saturday night in a closed meeting attended by about 40 persons. Following the meeting, Guinther declined to tell reporters what action had been taken.

Guinther, a faculty member at the Washington-Lee High School, lives at 3801 N. Washington blvd., Arlington. He yesterday refused to give the name of any other union official elected.

The union will be known as the Arlington School Employes Association, Guinther said, and is open to all school employes save those in supervisory positions.

At the Saturday night meeting, the chairman said, the benefits of organizing "for mutual benefits" were explained to employes who attended. Other eligible school workers will be contacted later, Guinther said.

Earlier, Guinther had classed the present teachers' organization, the Arlington Education Association, as "not truly representative."

Colonel to Face Trial Today on Mistreating GIs

Col. Henry H. McClune of San Antonio, Tex., will face a court-martial at Fort Meade, Md., today on charges of mistreating American soldiers at the Wurzburg, Germany, discriplinary camp.

McClune was commanding officer at Wurzburg when the alleged mistreatment took place in January, 1947. Three other officers who served under him have been acquitted of the charges.

Former prisoners have testified in the first three trials that they were not given sufficient clothing and blankets when confined to unheated solitary cells at Wurzburg. And one, Pvt. Joseph Suggs, said his feet had to be amputated because of frostbite he suffered in solitary.

Motorist Killed Trying to Free Locked Bumpers

Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 20 (AP).—A banker was killed today in a freak accident as he jumped up and down on a pair of locked automobile bumpers.

Paul N. Ritter, assistant treasurer of the Union Bank & Trust Co., wasn't able to start his car. Clayton F. Miller, Bethlehem, a passing motorist, offered to give him a push.

Their bumpers locked. As Ritter jumped on them, a third car, driven by Joseph P. Mulicka, Bethlehem, rammed Miller's car, knocking Ritter off the bumpers and fracturing his skull.

Bakers' Dozen Only $30,000 Short of Goal For Teen-Age Negro Youth Center Here

A youth center for Negro teen-agers living in Washington's mid-city slums is the aim of the Bakers Dozen.

Mrs. Alfred

And they are now only $30,000 short of goal. The site has been obtained — two buildings in the 1500 block of 4th st. nw.— but money is needed to renovate and equip them.

The Bakers Dozen, so named because there were 13 charter members when the group was organized in 1944, is made up of women leaders in Washington's Negro community.

Their objective, they say, is to slash juvenile delinquency through the medium of a youth center.

Woody Herman Show Set

The group is sponsoring the appearance of Woody Herman and the King Cole Trio at 8:30 p. m. Thursday at Uline Arena. Tickets will sell for $1.20 and up and the Bakers Dozen hopes to realize enough profits to open at least one floor of the proposed youth center.

The youth center will serve Negro teen-agers living in the area bounded by North Capitol st., K st., 9th st. and U st. nw.

The last census showed 9000 children under the age of 18 living in that area, 8000 of them Negro.

In this area are some of Washington's worst slums. Venereal disease, tuberculosis and juvenile delinquency flourish.

Latest figures available show that in one year 1034 children under 18 were involved in complaints on delinquent behavior in the area. The Bakers Dozen believes a youth center would eliminate much of this juvenile delinquency.

Live Six to a Room

Mrs. Ruth Spencer, 1800 Benning rd. ne., president of the group, says many of the Negro teen-agers haunt illegal liquor and gambling "dives" because they have no place at home to entertain friends.

"Many of these children," she said, "come from families where six to eight persons live in a single room. They don't have living rooms and many have never even seen a sofa."

Private donations, plus a benefit Duke Ellington concert at the Water Gate in June, 1946, made it possible for the Bakers Dozen to buy buildings at 1509 and 1511 4th st. nw. This site, it was decided, was the most central point in the area. Unsafe in their present state, the buildings still remain boarded up.

It is estimated $30,000 will be enough to renovate the buildings and equip them as a youth center and acquire services of one full-time and two part-time recreation workers. Members of the Bakers Dozen will volunteer their services to supplement the staff.

The Bakers Dozen opened a youth canteen in February, 1945, in borrowed space at the Northwest Settlement House, 515 M st. nw. Within 18 months there were 500 children on the rolls.

This was unsatisfactory because the settlement house could spare the teen-agers only one night a week and it was necessary to limit the number of youngsters who could attend.

The proposed youth center will have a large room for dancing, a stage, thrift shop, snack bar, hobby rooms and a library.

Other officers of the Bakers Dozen are Mildred U. Alfred, vice president; Lucille D. Roberts, recording secretary; Beatrice Y. Black, treasurer; Flaxie M. Pinkett, chairman property committee. Members are Hazel B. Adams, Henrietta B. Franklin, June Grant, Sarah Irving, Mignon B. Johnson, Carol H. Parris and Dorothea B. Stewart. Associate members are Margot P. Dyson, Evelyn C. Ireland and Ada F. Jones.

Among the group's advisors are Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, and Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.). Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, Bureau, is consultant of the organization.

Assembly Delegation Pledges Opposition To Annexation of Any Part of Silver Spring

Montgomery County's legislative delegation will not support a bill to expand the city of Takoma Park if it provides for annexation of any part of Silver Spring, its chairman has informed the Silge Park Citizens Association.

Officials of the civic group disclosed yesterday they had been given the assurance of Delegate Anders Lofstrand, jr., chairman of the delegation, that it would support no legislation which would include the Silge Park Hills area in territory to be taken in by the city. The community is now in the Silver Spring limits.

Milton Vollmer, chairman of legislation for the civic body, said Lofstrand had given his pledge at an emergency meeting of the association Saturday night. The special session was called after a weekly newspaper charged geographical limits outlined in the proposed bill would include Silge Park Hills in the annexation zone.

Vollmer said his committee would notify the Takoma Park City Council and members of the Montgomery and Prince Georges County delegations that Silgo Park Hills residents are opposed to incorporation into Takoma Park. He said the reasons are that the "business, social and civic interests of Silgo Park Hills are inextricably related to Silver Spring" and that the community is an "integral part of Montgomery County's park system."

Sweden, Britain Spurn Right Hand Road Traffic Rule

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 20 (AP). An effort to enforce the right hand rule of the road throughout the world has failed because of Swedish and United Kingdom objections, the United Nations Economic Commission announced.

The British delegate told a subcommittee a rule compelling all countries to conform to the right hand traffic rule within 10 years would cost Britain 600 million dollars. Sweden objected for the same reason.

The only major areas of the world drivers still stay on the left are Argentina, Sweden, Ireland, India, Britain and the British colonies.

Food Poisons 4400

Kawasaki, Japan, Feb. 29 (U.P.).—More than 4400 teachers and pupils of six elementary schools here suffered ptomaine poisoning today after eating meat stew furnished by the schools, Japanese police said.

Rome Demonstrators Demand U. S. Film Cut

Rome, Feb. 20 (AP).—Fist shaking at the United States Embassy and other American buildings marked a demonstration today demanding a cut in the number of foreign motion pictures shown in Italy. The demonstration, backed by the General Confederation of Labor, had a strong Communist flavor.

Anna Magnani, film star and other speakers told a Confederation meeting 860 foreign movies were imported last year, and about as many would be brought in this year. They said such a volume threatened Italy's own motion picture industry.

23-Year-Old Mother Has Her Seventh Child

Chicago, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Mrs. Harriet Dougherty, 23, today gave birth to her seventh child, a son.

She was married in 1938 when she was 13, and had her first child in 1941. Her husband, Everett, 29, is a jobless truck driver.

Supplied by air transport alone, 2½ million Berliners sample a new way of life

• In today's diplomatic Battle for Berlin, hope for democracy is being kept alive for millions in Western Europe by the U. S. Air Force.

Flying Douglas aircraft almost exclusively, Yankee crews have poured over half a million tons of supplies into Berlin since last June. This impressive feat has strained to the limit our resources in air transport. It has shown why cargo planes in sufficient numbers must be considered essential to any modern military defense program.

Needed—and desperately—are larger, faster types of aircraft designed exclusively for air transport. And to meet this need, Douglas is now building the giant Douglas DC-6A. Able to fly 30,000 lb. loads at 300 mph, the DC-6A will make available to the military services a cargo transport of rugged dependability, capable of supplying world-wide bases in any kind of national emergency.

How To Become A Popular Dancer Overnight

"The New Arthur Murray Way"

POOR POSTURE?
OLD-FASHIONED STYLE?
NO CONFIDENCE?
LACK OF GRACE?
NO VARIETY?

You'll be amazed how quickly these common dancing errors can be corrected. In just one lesson an Arthur Murray teacher can smooth over these faults and make you a sought-after partner. Because with "The New Arthur Murray Way" you learn the right way . . . right away.

MAKES LEARNING TO DANCE EASIER...FASTER

Even if you never danced before... you can go dancing after one lesson

THINK back to the last dancing party you went to...Who had the best time? The good dancers, of course. Were you one, or, did shyness and lack of skill keep you on the sidelines? Arthur Murray has helped thousands conquer their timidity through dance lessons. And, he can help you also, to develop poise and self-assurance. Here's how...

Arthur Murray has discovered a new, shortcut to dancing skill, "The First Step To Popularity," that makes learning to dance faster than ever. Once you master this key step you will have the secret to the Rumba, Fox Trot, Waltz, Samba, Tango — all the dances. And, this basic step is so simple to learn. You can have a lesson today and dance tonight with carefree confidence!

Why doctors prescribe dancing . . .

New popularity and good times are reason enough for learning to become a good dancer. But, there's another important thing to consider — dancing is good for you. It keeps you in excellent shape; develops your sense of balance and timing, makes you light on your feet and graceful. That's why doctors so often recommend dance lessons. They know that dancing helps youngsters through the awkward age and gives middle-aged people youthful vigor and improved posture.

Free dance analysis

So don't miss out on the happy, healthy times that should be yours. Visit an Arthur Murray Studio. Meet the instructors. You'll find them delightful people, marvelous dancers, but more than that...they are expert teachers. And, to show you how easy it is to learn they will gladly give you a free trial lesson. Bring your husband, wife or friend and have this check-up together. Don't worry about cost. Learning to dance actually costs less at Arthur Murray's because you learn so quickly. Come in and see for yourself.

Proof you can dance after one lesson

To show you how easily and quickly you can become a good dancer Arthur Murray is offering for a limited time only his entertaining and instructive dance book — "Murray-Go-Round."

Send for it today. Use the handy coupon below.

Learning to dance is fun when you put yourself in the hands of an Arthur Murray expert

Vivian Marnett, another charming teacher whose specialty is the Rumba, says, "People who don't know, think the Rumba is only for experts. The steps and rhythm seem so tricky. They're always amazed when they find themselves doing it in just 5 minutes."

Lovely Lorie Hilton, a typical Arthur Murray teacher, says, "'The New Arthur Murray Way' is such a direct method that everyone grasps it the first time you show them. In no time they can do all the dances gracefully, expertly. It's fun to teach dancing this new way."

Read what others say about their dancing lessons at Arthur Murray's

"Learning to dance at Arthur Murray's is such a healthful form of exercise. It's so relaxing . . . a tonic for tired nerves and a good hobby which does not require excessive energy. Knowing how to dance correctly is so satisfying, too."
W. M. Andrew
Vancouver, B. C.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my lessons at Arthur Murray's. Having always been a very active person I find that dancing is a wonderful form of exercise. It not only tones up the whole system . . . it gives added self-assurance and grace, too."
Antoinette L. Blaauw
New York City

"My dancing has progressed so rapidly since my first visit to your studio that I'm amazed. And, the lessons are such fun, too! I find dancing not only wonderful exercise but being able to do all the latest steps has given me added self-confidence."
Florence Moore
Chicago, Illinois

FREE TRIAL LESSON and Dance Analysis

Here's your chance to see how much fun a dance lesson can be...Thanks to "The New Arthur Murray Way" there's only one basic step to learn and remember, and it's easy as A-B-C. Another reason lessons are so enjoyable is because Arthur Murray teachers are trained to encourage...not criticize. There's never any mention of your faults. They're corrected before you know it and your good points are accented. So come in now and see for yourself how pleasant and easy it is to be a good dancer. There's no obligation, of course, for the free trial lesson.

Earl Wild Pleases Symphony Audience

By Richard Keith

Yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall, we had another all-Gershwin concert by the National Symphony assisted by Earl Wild, pianist, with Howard Mitchell conducting. A large audience turned out for it in spite of the inviting spring weather outside.

Unlike most other one-composer concerts, an all-Gershwin one must be practically the same every time because of the small amount of symphonic music that Gershwin wrote. Yesterday's program included the usual Cuban Overture, An American in Paris, the Rhapsody in Blue, the Concerto in F, and the Bennett arrangement of music from Porgy and Bess.

The well-worn Rhapsody still comes out ahead of all the rest in both popularity and musical worth. It is a solid, not too pretentious, well-shaped work and it is not the fault of the piece itself that many of us have heard it enough times for one lifetime.

Mr. Wild's performance was brilliant and living. He managed to throw a new light on both the Concerto and the Rhapsody by departing frequently from the conventional interpretations. The audience recalled him enthusiastically for several bows.

The brass section of the orchestra deserves credit for its fine down-to-earth playing. It did not disdain to get into the spirit of the jazzier moments. The orchestra and the soloist were in complete accord except for a slight altercation in the last movement of the Concerto.

Krehm Recital Dynamic

Ida Krehm, pianist, gave a recital last evening at the National Gallery. The program included several unusual items — an Andante and Allegro by the 17th century composer, Rossi, a Sonata by a Scarlatti disciple, Soler, and music by the South American composers, Vianna and Ginastera.

Miss Krehm is a dynamic and convincing performer. Her playing of rapid octave passages is astonishingly accurate and brilliant. Her program was rather too much on the bombastic side, but she proved her abilty to play softly and expressively in the Chopin B flat minor Nocturne and the Rossi Andantino.

Moscow in Festive Air For Voting on Judges

Moscow, Feb. 20 (AP).—A holiday atmosphere prevailed in Moscow today, despite gloomy weather, as Muscovites flocked to the polls to elect judges to the people's courts.

Flags, banners and placards were out and music played on the municipal loudspeaker system at every street corner.

IT'S NOT LOVE: Fear is the emotion that grips Greta Gynt in this scene from the British chiller, "Take My Life," now at the Hippodrome. Marius Goring is the gloved beast

U. S. Needs More Trees, Forest Service Warns

The Forest Service warned yesterday that the Nation faces a future critical shortage of lumber and other timber products unless vigorous action is taken to grow more trees.

In a report on a Nation-wide appraisal of foresty resources and their use, the service said the saw timber supply is declining in quantity and quality. The annual cut of timber and natural losses were said to be 50 per cent greater than the current annual growth.

One on the Aisle—

Riding the Rails Is Seldom Mild

By Richard L. Coe

AMONG THE LITTLE noted contributions Europe has made to the cinematic art is the train compartment: you know, those little rooms that can be sealed from the passageway by judicious drawing of blinds and from which a body can be dumped from a speeding train.

This handy dramatic device, which our land knows not, has proved no end helpful to writers of movies, both domestic and European. England, which provided the memorable "Night Train," has now come up with another that climaxes on a London-bound express, "Take My Life," a good murder yarn at the Hippodrome.

The excitement of this one is of the climaxing nature. At first I couldn't have cared less about the murdered dame and her accused butcher, but before it was over I was happily engrossed in the thing and was cheering on lonely Greta Gynt in her quest to clear her husband's name. Once the other passengers duck out of the carriage and Greta is left alone with the beastly educator who surreptiously did in his wife, you're in for some of the zing these mystery film promise.

Greta's playing the role of a healthy prima donna making her London debut at Covent Garden. Her husband, who hasn't done too well before linking up with her voice and beauty, is approached by an old flame during the performance and Greta flies into a bit of temper. After she flings some crockery at him, he goes out for a walking sulk at just the hour when the lady of his past is snuffed out.

Circumstance, in brief, is against Hugh Williams, as flatulent, beefy prosecutor, Francis L. Sullivan, is pointing out to the court. But Greta's temper passes, she knows her husband is guiltless and resolves to find a way to clear him. That she does goes without saying.

The plot is unrolled in a purposefully confusing way, told through the accusation of the Crown's Sullivan, but spliced every so often with shots of what really happened so that when Greta comes across the villain and audience knows more about it than she and Sullivan do. The manner of telling stretches credulity, but as a trick to hold your interest it works out well enough.

The details are neatly handled with that affection the British movie makers give to presumably minor matters and while this one certainly hasn't got the unabashed excitement of early Hitchcock—"The Lady Vanishes" or "Night Train"—"Take My Life" is a suspenseful yarn mystery fanciers will enjoy gnawing.

Lower half of the Hippodrome's new double bill is a cape and gaslight thing called "Caravan." Stewart Granger, the British Robert Taylor, is the star of this one, a distinctly minor effort.

But "Take My Life" is an effective melodrama that should lure you from your mundane self.

THE NATIONAL Symphony's "Matching Dollars" campaign is Desert Song," with "The Heiress," featuring Basil Rathbone, Beatrice spreading and a handier way to raise shekels for our orchestra couldn't be imagined . . . Some anonymous wunderkinder has agreed to match, dollar for dollar, every buck that's sent in to the orchestra's special "Matching Dollars Fund." . . . So whatever the size of your check, that means you're sending twice as much by marking it for the Matching Dollars Fund, to the Symphony Office, 1727 K st. . . . It's the oddest feeling signing a check that you know will be worth twice as much!

WEEKEND VISITORS, besides the Symphony's amusing Gershwinite, Earl Wild, included Vernon Rice, dramatic editor of the New York Post, a widely traveled gentleman indeed to whom I gave my A-3 lecture on how it happens the Nation's Capitol doesn't have any live theater . . . Vernon knew all about it, of course, but I could see he doesn't really believe it.

CLARENCE DERWENT, president of Actors' Equity, made the best impromptu crack in a long while on the no-theater mess down this way . . . He asked me what picture the National was showing and I told him Jeanette MacDonald and Lassie in "The Sun Comes Up." . . . "H'mmm," sighed Clarence, "the National really is going to the dogs." . . . It goes to the horses come Wednesday with the opening of "The Return of October," with Glenn Ford, Terry Moore and a stable of horses. "Any patron who doesn't like this," vows the National, "and tells us so after they see it, will be our guest for one performance of any future National feature."

BALTIMORE'S Ford's Theater schedule this week bills "The Straight and Patricia Collinge, due the week of March 7 . . . The latter's a Guild subscription play.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE COMPLAINING voice of Frank Filchock is heard from up Canada way, and it is a full-sized squawk of what he calls the increasingly rough deal he has been getting from Bert Bell, the National Football League commissioner.

Filchock is something of a national hero in Canada after being voted the most valuable player in the Canadian Rugby Union and winning the post of player-coach of the Montreal team. But in United States football, the ex-Redskin, ex-Giant half back is still officially and emphatically non grata.

POVICH

He doesn't like it, and says so, in an article authored by Milton Gross in the current issue of Sport Magazine. He talked of the attempted fix of a Giants' game by New York gamblers in 1946, and said wrathfully:

"They needed a goat in the whole business, and I was it. They dealt me one off the bottom of the deck."

In court, Filchock was accused of nothing, convicted of nothing. He was a prosecution witness in the trial of the gamblers, and it was agreed that he had turned down the bribes offered him. For failure to report the bribes, however, the NFL suspended him indefinitely.

MAYBE A FEW MORE circumstances of the case ought to be dubbed in here. It was proved that Filchock had associated with the gamblers and that bribes had been offered him and Merle Hapes to throw a game. In court Filchock pointed them out, including Contact Man Alvin Paris. The District Attorney's office admitted that he cooperated to convict Paris.

"Twice since my suspension I wrote to Bell and asked him for the chance to talk this over," says Filchock. "He answered me, all right, but just wrote that if I had any new evidence to put it in writing.

"I've never been suspended definitely, only indefinitely. Why continue it? Why not come out and say one thing or another. He's just got me hanging. Paris is out of jail after serving 280 days of a one-year sentence. What about me?" As the man who turned down a bribe, Filchock resents his continuing suspension beyond the term of the convicted attempted "fixer."

FILCHOCK DECLARES that the NFL "took the easy way out," in handing him an indefinite suspension. Maybe it was a bum rap, if the worst that was proved against him was that he had associated with gamblers; at least it could be viewed as a hard rap in the light of some of the component parts of the National Football League itself in that year.

In 1946, two of the NFL teams were owned by former professional gamblers. Another was controlled by one of the highest rolling bettors in the nation, and Filchock was no less in the company of betting men than were the league's club owners.

He's made it clear that he wants an end to his suspension, or definite expulsion from the game. Neither expelled nor cleared, he lives in kind of a half-light and it's understandable that he is discontented with that status. He dislikes to hold still for what he thinks is shabby treatment.

CANADA HAS ACCEPTED Filchock warmly despite his football status in the United States. They admired the way he made the transition from American football to the sharply-conrasted rules of the Canadian game. The initial objections to Filchock melted after Leo Dandurand, president of the Montreal club, went to New York, read depositions of the trial and returned convinced that the player was the victim of a ruling, not guilty of a misdemeanor.

In Canada he has bought a home, now lives there with his new bride and their daughter. Last year in the off-season he took a job laying concrete at $60 a week. This year he has been elevated to vice president of the company.

He's happy in his new locale, except for the stigma of his suspension from American football. That last is hard to take, he says. He wants a better break from the football league for whom the Bell toils.

Post Bowling Tournament Enters Second Big Week

The Washington Post's third annual bowling tournament moved into its second week last night and from all indications it'll be a banner one.

Bowling alley operators are waging a red-hot fight to see which alley can enlist the greatest number of entries for the event, proceeds of which go to the Metropolitan Police Boys clubs.

Hap Newman's Chevy Chase Ice Palace alleys led the way the first week with a total of more than 700 entries of the 5000 reported. In second place with 520 is Hi-Skor, while Bethesda Bowling Center, through Manager Fred Murphy, is doing a bang-up job with better than 500. In fourth with 454 entries is Penn Bowling Center, where Lou Kramer has promised to do between 1000 and 1500 before the competition ends on March 1. Brookland has approximately 400.

Bunched up for sixth and running almost neck and neck at 350 or better are Kalorama, Lucky Strike, Greenway and Colonial Village.

An added boost was given the tournament yesterday at Lucky Strike where the District Firemen gained revenge for a setback last night by winning two team matches out of three, and the singles and doubles matches. Fire Team No. 1, with Jack Meade hurling a 164-367, beat the Police, 1723 to 1668. Police No. 2 had 1612 to 1602 for the Firemen, and Fire Team No. 3 scored 1650 to 1643 for the Bluecoats.

In doubles Freddie Troup and John Brennan, of the Firemen, with 753, whipped the Police duo of Bill Richardson and John Rinnick, who had 627, while Firefighter Joe Brown tallied 386 to trim Ed Varney of Police, who had 339.

Terps Almost 'In'

Conference Still Has 3 Berths Open

By The Associated Press

The Southern Conference had accomplished little today in its campaign to find three more teams for the league's annual basketball tournament at Durham, N. C., March 3, 4 and 5.

A week ago five spots in the eight-club dribble derby had been filled. And today only those same five quintets were assured of competing for the championship won the last two years by North Carolina State's Wolfpack.

The five teams and their conference records include North Carolina State (12-1), William and Mary's Indians (8-3), Davidson's Wildcats (10-4), North Carolina's Tar Heels (10-5) and George Washington's Colonials (8-4).

Aside from these squads, Wake Forest's Deacons and Maryland's Terps looked like pretty fair bets to receive invitations.

How They Stand

	W.	L.	Pct.	PF	OP
North Carolina State	12	1	.923	853	604
William and Mary	8	3	.727	664	559
Davidson	10	4	.714	755	673
North Carolina	10	5	.667	836	611
George Washington	8	4	.667	695	602
Maryland	6	5	.545	636	604
South Carolina	5	5	.500	599	587
Wake Forest	6	7	.462	675	718
Duke	5	6	.455	574	563
Washington and Lee	5	6	.455	651	684
Virginia Tech	5	8	.385	696	744
Furman	4	8	.333	677	754
Richmond	4	8	.333	627	720
Clemson	4	9	.308	715	735
Virginia Military	3	7	.300	511	626
The Citadel	0	9	.000	354	534

Terps Need Split

The Deacons, who have been hot and cold this season, had a record of six victories and seven defeats. However, their two remaining games are with a couple of fast-fading fives, Furman and South Carolina.

Maryland boasted six triumphs against five losses. The Terps have games to play with Clemson, the University of Richmond and Virginia Military Institute, all out of the running for the tournament, and fifth-place George Washington. A split would put Maryland in the Durham classic.

Who gets the eighth tournament place is, to be trite, a $64 question. South Carolina's Gamecocks, Duke's Blue Devils, and Washington and Lee's Generals could make the select circle.

South Carolina's chances are exceedingly dim although the Gamecocks were in seventh place with their 5-5 showing. The Gamecocks still must face three first division clubs—North Carolina, Davidson and Wake Forest—and The Citadel.

Duke Plays Carolina

Duke must defeat its bitter rival, North Carolina, at Durham Friday night to wind up with an even 6-6 mark. That .500 finish, however, would make the Dukes the No. 8 team if all other games run true to form. The first time Duke met North Carolina, though, the Tar Heels won easily, 64-34.

Washington and Lee gets an opportunity to bolster its tourney chances Monday night. The Generals go to William and Mary. Maryland is at Clemson and North Carolina invades South Carolina.

Duke rekindled its tournament hopes Saturday night by beating Wake Forest, 61-51. North Carolina State walloped North Carolina for the second time this season, 79-39.

Davidson edged Clemson, 54-52, and Maryland squeezed by South Carolina, 57-56. The University of Richmond trimmed The Citadel, 58-42.

Outside the circuit, Furman topped Wofford, 91-81; the Quantico Marines routed Virginia Military, 65-49; George Washington turned back Temple, 56-49.

Dinner Gong, War Trophy, 4 to 1

Agua Caliente, Mex., Feb. 20 (AP).—Dinner Gong and War Trophy today were 4-to-1 co-favorites in final Caliente future book quotations on Saturday's $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

On Trust remained the third choice at 5 to 1, followed by Rose Beam at 7 to 1 and Autocrat and Stepfather, both at 8 to 1. Old Rockport, surprise winner of the Santa Anita Derby yesterday was cut from 50 to 1 to 25 to 1.

BLUBBERWEIGHT CHAMP—Pound for pound, Corpl. Lewis W. Knight is one of the heaviest fighters in the world. He won't participate in the Army World Boxing Tournament opening tonight at Fort Meyer because officials were unable to find any two men his weight which is 332 pounds, give or take 20. The little fellow who seems dwarfed by the massive soldier-fighter is Sergt. Frank O'Dell, a 140-pounder, who will be in the tourney

Army's World-Wide Boxing Opens Tonight at Fort Myer

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The United States Army begin its biggest boxing operation in history at 8 p. m. tonight in Fort Myer's spacious and flag bedecked riding hall.

Seventy-two champions from installations as far away as Japan and Germany will compete for the Army's eight world-wide titles. Finals are Saturday night.

The six-night event is already practically a "sell out." The 5500 nightly free tickets, distributed to civilians and servicemen through the area Army camps and recruiting stations, are nearly all gone.

Tournament officials will throw the doors open to the tickesless fans a half hour after the first bout each night so that they can fill in the empty seats.

The fistic carnival is being financed by profits from the Military District of Washington's post exchanges and post theaters.

Adding dignity and color to the show will be the ringside appearance of Congressmen, Cabinet members, the general and flag officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard, and attaches from 20 foreign embassies and legations.

The program will be televised throughout the East and Midwest; the newsreels will record it for the rest of the Nation. And radio will beam it all over the world.

The tournament drum-beaters are pointing to their "baby" as proof that the boxing champions who were supposed to come out of the Army after the war are still

Czechs Win Hockey, U.S. 3d

Stockholm, Feb. 20 (AP).—Czechoslovakia won the world amateur ice hockey championship today, defeating Sweden, 3-0, in the final round.

Canada finished second and the United States third. Sweden was fourth, Switzerland fifth, and Austria sixth and last.

The United States forces drubbed Austria, 9-1, and Canada safeguarded its runner-up position by playing Switzerland to a 1-to1 tie.

A crowd of 11,000, including Swedish Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, saw the Czechs score their deciding triumph in the Olympic stadium ice rink this afternoon. Only about 300 saw the American victory in the morning.

The victory was the Czechs fourth against one loss and gave them a total of eight points. Two points are awarded for a victory and one for a tie. The six teams played each other once in this final round-robin.

The United States led by Bruce Mather who scored six goals, made it three wins in a row after losing their first two contests. The Star-Spangled forces wound up with a total of six points, same as Canada, but placed third Czech Star Skips; Reported Off to U. S.

Stockholm, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—A 23-year-old star on Czechoslovakia's world championship hockey team did not appear to return to Prague with his teammates tonight. Teammates said the player, Zderek Marek, disappeared early today from the hotel where the Czechs were staying. A Swedish newspaper said tonight he had jumped the team and planned to emigrate to the United States.

Bob Mathias Gets Sullivan Award

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Bob Mathias today received the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy as the amateur athlete who did the most to advance the cause of good sportsmanship during 1948.

The presentation was made at an Amateur Athletic Union luncheon at the New York Athletic Club, with John B. Kelly, winner of the 1947 award, passing along the prized aymbol to the 18-year-old Tulare, Calif., youth, who now is attending Kiski Prep School.

Johnny Wins By 1 Stroke At Houston

Houston, Tex., Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Johnny Palmer, the Badin, N. C., dynamo, sank six birdies on his final round today to win the $10,000 Houston Open golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 272.

Palmer showed super-smooth form to finish a single stroke ahead of Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the Memphis, Tenn., dentist, who led the field Saturday and at the end of 54 holes today. The toothpick-slim Carolinian shot a 71 this morning and then a 67 this afternoon.

Middlecoff bobbled twice in the last round and ended up with a 70 for a total of 273. He had a 71 in the morning.

Jim Turnesa, Briar Cliff, N. Y., pacesetter in the opening round, was third with a 274, firing two three-under-par 69's on the last day of this tournament.

Middlecoff Slumps

Other top finishers were Jim Ferrier, the transplanted Australian who calls San Francisco home, and Marty Furgol of Albuquerque at 276, and E. H. (Dutch) Harrison of Albuquerque, at 279.

Middlecoff amazed the gallery of 3500 Saturday when he sank eight birdies, but had trouble today when it hurt.

He voluntarily penalized himself when his ball was moved accidentally on the twelfth green. The one-stroke penalty cost him a tie for first with Palmer.

On the final green, Middlecoff faltered by a matter of inches to miss an eagle three, which also would have tied it up. His ball drifted slightly to the right of the cup, but just wouldnt fall in.

Palmer, too happy to put himself in the hard-luck class, missed a six-foot putt on the eighteenth by one inch.

Slammin Sammy Snead of White Sulpher Springs, W. Va., came into the money with a 281. Slammin' Sammy, appreciating the large gallery that followed him around the final 18, showed off some of the long drives that go with his monicker.

Snead shot seven birdies and came up with two shots on every three par hole on the course. Combining drives with steady putting, Snead carded a 34-32—66 for one of the tournament's lowest rounds.

Demaret, Mangrum Fare Badley

Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., and Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ohio, the pre-tourney favorites, fared badly over the muddy Pine Forest Country Club course.

Mangrum was in the prize money, but Demaret failed to tee off today after carding a 147 through Saturday's competition.

The final 36 holes were played today to make up for time lost Friday when rain washed out the second round.

John Palmer, 67-67-71-67—272 ($2000).
Cary Middlecoff, 68-64-71-70—273 ($1400).
Jim Turnesia, 68-70-69-69—274 ($1000).
Jim Ferrier, 69-69-68-70—276 ($750).
Marty Furgol, 69-69-69-69—276 ($750).
E. J. Harrison, 68-70-69-70—277 ($600).
Sam Snead, 70-71-73-74-66—281 ($529).
Lloyd Mangrum, 71-68-72-72—283 ($415).
Skip Alexander, 72-66-72-73—283 ($415).
Horton Smith, 71-71-71-71—284 ($256).
Fred Haas, jr., 71-70-72-71—284 ($256).
Bob Toski, 69-73-73-67—284 ($256).
Rob Gajda, 72-70-75-75-67—284 ($256).

Robertson Signs Nat Contract

Sherry Robertson has signed a 1949 Nat contract, Owner Clark Griffith announced last night in Orlando, Fla. Robertson hit .233 in 95 games last year.

Griffith said only three regulars now are unsigned. They are Pitchers Rae Scarborough, Mickey Haefner and Walt Masterson.

Frank Parker Wins

Paris, Feb. 20 (AP).—Frank Parker of Los Angeles defeated Paul Jalabert of France today, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, in the second round of the French indoor tennis championship.

Llanos, Cooper Fight Tonight At Turner's

One of the best little men to show at Turner's Arena in months, Art Llanos, returns to the 14th and W sts. ring tonight to take on Washington's Jimmy Cooper in the featured 10-rounder.

Llanos, unbeaten in 73 fights, made a great hit in the same ring last week when he trimmed Johnny Arduini. The little Puerto Rican has never lost a fight.

Sixto Escobar, two-time bantam king, thinks the hard-hitting Llanos will be king of the featherweights within a year. "He's one of the hardest-hitting little fighters I've ever seen," said Escobar, a stout puncher Limself.

Llanos wasn't Cooper's original opponent. The local lad was scheduled to tangle with Jose Cardenas, but when the latter cut his eye Matchmaker Gabe Menendez jumped at the opportunity to replace him with Llanos.

This will be Cooper's first appearance since he dropped a split decision to Leo LeBron at Turner's three weeks ago.

If Cooper interrupts Lanos' unbeaten march tonight, he'll probably be paired with Danny Petro, the Southwest had boy who's offered to fight Cooper for free.

Harvey Jones, former National AAU light-heavyweight champion, will fight Johnny Hick, and Roy Wirt, will battle Baltimore welterweight Billy Caulfield, in five-rounders. In fours Puggy King, local featherweight, will take on Jackie O'keefe of Providence, R. I.; Scott Richardson will box Dick Barber and Little Dynamite will take on Frank Ball.

After Rough Race

French Track Star Urges Cerdan as Sub

By Stan Opotowsky

New York, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Marcel Hansenne ruefully asked today if, maybe, Marcel Cerdan shouldn't represent France in future track competition.

Looking back on his defeat in a wierd 1000-yard run in the National AAU indoor championships at Madison Square Garden last night, Hansenne, the runner, said of his race with Seton Hall's Phil Thigpen: "It was a tough race. Thigpen is a better match for my countryman, Marcel Cerdan, than for me. I am no fighter."

The crowd of 12,000 which saw the meet knew exactly what the disconsolate Hansenne meant. The Frenchman, in order to gain even second place in the coveted event, had to fight—literally fight—his way past Thigpen in the waning laps of the race.

As it was, Thigpen, who finished an eventual third, was disqualified for using his elbows on the turn.

Thigpen, defending champion in the 1000, starting on the pole in the six-man final, grabbed the lead and, apparantly resolved to hold it at all costs, although he set a snail's pace that required 59.3 seconds to cover the first 440 yards.

Whenever Hansenne challenged him, Thigpen fought him off with wide-thrust elbows and bursts of speed. Hansenne tried half a dozen times to get around the thrashing Thigpen before he finnally made the grade.

While the two were jockeying for the last time, Bob Mealey of Cornell, the ultimate winner, passed them both and led the field into the final lap. Hansenne forged in front once more but his battle with Thigpen had taken the starch out of him.

Stags Bump Indianapolis By 95 to 72

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—The Chicago Stags overran the Indianapolis Jets, 95-72, in a Basketball Association of America game today at Chicago Stadium before 3,866 fans.

Andy Phillip sparked the host team with 22 points. Carlisle Towery tallied 18 for the Jets.

The Stags went ahead in the first quarter, 27-15, and never were in danger. They led, 49-31, at halftime.

Caps' Victory May Boomerang

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IT WAS NICE to see the Caps beat the Bullets for a change, but it now develops that the Saturday victory may backfire on the ice house hot shots. . . . The defeat dropped the Bullets into fourth place and if they wind up the season there they'll draw the Caps in the first round of the Podoloff Payoffs, an assignment the Caps don't especially covet. Here's why: Washington's three triumphs over Baltimore were achieved by margins of one, three and four points, but Baltimore's three successes over Washington were accomplished by 20, 14 and 10 point differences . . . Even though there would be Joe Fulks to contend with, the Caps would rather meet Philadelphia in the playoffs and it may be that they will. The Warriors, Bullets and Knicks are closely bunched with only two games separating the second and fourth place teams and 11 more contests to play . . . Under the playoff arrangement, the first-place club meets the fourth-place team while the second and third place teams are tangling. . . .

CHUCK DAVEY is unbeaten and untied, but hardly uninvited. A score or more of fight managers are hounding the Michigan State welterweight to turn pro. He's regarded as one of the best college fighters in recent years and he's got a record to substantiate that belief . . . In 43 collegiate scraps, the former choir boy is undefeated and a good portion of his triumphs are kayos. He's a three-time winner of the national collegiate welterweight title and is a favorite to make it four in a row, come March . . . If he does, he'll become the first boxer ever to win the nationals four straight years . . . His coach, George Mikas, two-time national light-heavy champ at Wisconsin, thinks Chuck is "the best college fighter I've ever seen" . . . And Al Webber, Detroit referee, regards the southpawing Davey as being good enough today to be a main-eventer anywhere . . . Chuck's latest victory was at the expense of Maryland's Barney Lincoln Friday. He stopped Lincoln in the third round after rattling lefts and rights on the willing Terp boxer's head for two rounds.

CHUCK DAVEY
Top Pro Prospect . . .

NOW THAT HE'S BACK in it again, George Garber wants to remain in basketball. The acting coach of George Washington has done a wonderful job with the Colonials, but as far as he knows now he'll be through after the Southern Conference tournament . . . Otts Zahn, who became ill five days before the season, is expected back in a couple weeks. What will happen to Garber, coach protem, George doesn't know, but he's itching

Interhigh Playoffs Set For Tuesday

The Interhigh, Catholic and Montgomery County Leagues decide their championships this week as the scholastic basketball season reaches its climax with 52 games.

First place Wilson meets fourth place Coolidge, and the joint occupants of second place, Eastern and Central, clash Tuesday night as the Interhigh playoffs begin at the Armory. The two winners lock up in the championship struggle Saturday afternoon at the Armory.

On Thursday night at College Park, St. John's seeks to clinch the Catholic title when it faces Gonzaga. The Cadets have already whipped the Gonzagans once this season, 33-27, but reversal would throw the race into a tie.

The hot Montgomery County race reaches a decision Saturday night at College Park where Montgomery-Blair and Bethesda-Chevy Chase meet in the rubber game of their three-game series.

Wilson and Central are favored to win their Interhigh semi-finals games. The Tigers whipped Coolidge, 35-31, and the Vikings trimmed Eastern, 51-37, in earlier games.

Easily the outstanding player in the playoffs is Jimmy Pantos, the shooting and playmaking star of defending champion Central. The Vikings built their offense around him. Wilson and Coolidge both proved that Central could not win when Pantos was stopped.

The three challengers showed more balance and teamwork than Central in getting to the titular round robin.

In winning eight out of nine league games, Wilson adhered to the two-team system. Leo Speros, Jim Young, Don Scott and Baker Smith were each good for a modest nine points or so every game, enough to outscore the opposition.

Lack of height proved no handicap to the scrappy Eastern and Coolidge teams. Undersized ballhawks like the Dyer brothers, Teddy and Franny, outwrestling the bigger boys, for the ball, provided Eastern with its "equalizer." Sharpshoting Kenny Luxenberg and Jim Hollowell, and driving Don Eslin, all under 5 feet, 8 inches, cut Coolidge's foes down to its size.

Green Hornet On Uline Show

A colorful wrestling show, topped by a one-fal finish feature between the Green Hornet, 270-pound masked newcomer, and Tarzan Frank Hewitt, 240-pound Canadian strongman, is on tap for local mat fans at Uline Arena tonight.

An Australian tag team match also is scheduled and brings together Angelo Savoldi and Paddy Mack against Arnold Skaaland and Art Brady. Lew Laird steps out against Fritz Wallach in one of two 30-minute supporting bouts and Abe Coleman meets Geza Tako in the other.

ONE FOR THE BOYS—Police Inspector Clarence H. Lutz rolls out the first ball yesterday as the police and fire department bowling teams enter The Washington Post bowling tourney at Lucky Strike Alleys. Proceeds go to the Police Boys Club. Fire Chief Clement Murphy, at right, waits his turn to roll as members of the two teams look on ert J. Barrett, Superintendent of Police, and Fire Chief Clement Murphy tossed out the first balls.

Post Event In 2d Week

An encouraging report came from Doc Gartrell, manager of Columbia alleys, who reported that his Mount Vernon Methodist League turned in 41 entries Saturday night. The Rev. Dr. John Ruskin, quite a bowler himself, was among those who participated, and has urged a 100 per cent sign-up by the 200 bowlers on the 40 league teams next Saturday. Gartrell also said that tonight he expects to secure every player among the 24 teams in the popular Merchants League. In this respect, he has enlisted the support of President Mark Waldron.

To enter, all you have to do is pay 50 cents. Only league bowlers are eligible. One-half of this amount goes to the Police Boys' Club, the other to the prize fund. And there'll be some $1500 in prize money.

Tough Sledding

Lake Placid, Feb. 20 (AP).—The two-man world championship bobsled races were called off again today. H. L. Garren, secretary of the organizing committee for the races, said the mile-long chute "was not in condition, but with another night of cool weather the races will be definitely on."

Fidler Joins The Post In Defense of Bing Crosby

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—Jimmie Fidler said on ABC and Mutual Broadcast tonight:

"I've often criticized the annual custom of the Hollywood Women's Press Club publicly selecting what they term the year's most uncooperative stars. Several unjust selections been made, based purely on personal dislike of one or two disgruntled reporters. It's evil practice. In line with my criticism, The Washington Post recently published an open letter to Bing Crosby.

"I thank the editors of The Washington Post for their candid opinion on Hollywood Women's Press Club. I'm afraid the ladies have been taking themselves too seriously."

FIDLER then read the message. It was sent to Crosby on last December 22, and said:

"The Washington Post suggests respectfully that the dear ladies drag themselves away from Hollywood and Vine and take a look round the country to determine how this man Crosby spends his free time.

"Three times in recent years this 'uncooperative' individual has come to Washington at our request to appear in charity or patriotic events, traveling hundreds of tiresome miles to do his part in causes he considered good.

"Twice he appeared in our Celebrities Golf Tournament, and on each occasion thousands of dollars were raised to fight juvenile delinquency. With this money Boys Clubs have been equipped, settlement houses have been enlarged, kids baseball leagues maintained, and Washington kids have been kept off the street.

"ON ANOTHER occasion he traveled from Memphis by train to appear at The Washington Post's War Bond Baseball game—the first of its kind—and was a big factor in raising two million dollars when it was needed. And that night he went out to Walter Reed Hospital and sang for hours for the boys and the only request he made was no publicity.

"If the gals mean he refuses to fall for gag interviews and phony heart throbs, the undersigned wouldn't know about that. But if they mean that Der Bingle isn't No. 1 Citizen in the business of being helpful when the kind of 'cooperation' that saves lives and makes good citizens is concerned, we wish they would interview:

Giermak Just About Certain Top Va. Scorer

Richmond, Va., Feb. 20 (AP).—Chester Giermak, William and Mary's star center, was about ready to revieve congratulations today. Unless something unforseen happens, Giermak will be the 1949 Old Dominion College basketball scoring champion.

Giermak had a total of 557 points, already a record. He hopes to hit the 600-point mark and has three games left in which to accomplish his goal.

Far behind Giermak was the University of Virginia's Joe Noertker, who had 425. Jay Handlan, Washington and Lee's freshman sensation, was in third with 306.

The State's leading scorers:

Players.	G.	Gls.	F.	T.P.
Giermak, W. & M.	27	228	101	557
Noertker, Virginia	21	175	75	425

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 20 (AP).—Billy Talbert of New York won the Buffalo Tennis and Squash Club midwinter tennis tournament today with a 7—5, 6—2 victory over Billy Vogt.

Tourney Tickets On Sale at Garden

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Public sale of tickets for the first three nights of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament will go on sale at Madison Square Garden next Saturday morning.

Purchasers will be limited to two tickets for each of the evenings, March 12, 14, and 17.

The finals will be held March 19. Tickets for the finals will go on sale March 5 along with the pasteboards for the NCAA Eastern regionals, March 2-22, and the East-West all-star game, April 2. All of the events will be held in the Garden.

AAU Gymnastics Debut Scheduled for March 5

Gymnastics—a new sport in the category of District of Columbia AAU competition—will be inaugurated Saturday night, March 5, at the Central YMCA. The meet will include competition in the side horse, rope climb, rings, horizontal bars, parallel bars, tumbling and trampoline.

Entries close March 1 and may be filed with D. C. AAU Chairman Dave Field, care physical education department, University of Maryland.

Hungarian Wins Skating

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 20 (AP).—Hungary's Kornel Pajor closed with a rush today to capture the world speed skating championship as the United States' Ken Henry and John Werket finished fourth and fifth.

The slender Hungarian, an outstanding star in distance races, took second in the 1500-meter event today and then clinched the title by winning the 10,000-meter grind, second and final race of the day and the fourth event on the two-day program.

Werket, mighty mite from Minneapolis, annexed the 1500-meter title and gained eighth in the 10,000. Henry, crack middle distance ace from Chicago who won the 500 yesterday, finished third in the 1500 and seventh in the 10,000.

Both Henry and Werket represented the Stars and Stripes in the Olympics.

A crowd of 30,000, including Norway's 76-year-old King Haakon, saw the 25-year-old Hungarian engineering student skate to victory.

Pajor finished eighth in the 500, first in the 5000, second in the 1500 and first in the 10,000. This grand all-around performance gave him a winning low score total of 211.073 points. Kees Broeckman of Holland and Odd Lundberg, the defending titleholder from Norway, finished second and third, respectively, although neither won any of the four races. Broeckman totaled 211.818 points and Lundberg 212.960.

Jones Heads Presidents' Title Defense

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 20 (AP).—Approximately 150 track athletes from nine Virginia high and prep schools are entered in the State indoor scholastic championship meet scheduled here tomorrow.

The indoor carnival will open at 1:30 p. m., in the University of Virginia's Memorial gymnasium.

Alexandria's George Washington High School will be back in good strength to defend its Virginia High School League Group I title against sizable squads from Thomas Jefferson High of Richmond; Maury High, of Norfolk; Washington-Lee High of Arlington; Woodrow Wilson High of Portsmouth, and Newport News High.

Bobby Jones, a winner in last year's meet and All-American half-miler will be the anchor man on the George Washington squad. Jones also holds the State indoor and outdoor half-mile crown. He won the mile event at the AAU games in New York Saturday.

The two leading powers in State private school track circles, Episcopal High and Woodberry Forest, will battle it out between themselves. A small group from Fork Union Military Academy is the only other opposition in the prep division.

All entries will compete in the same events, with the separation coming in the score keeping. The list includes the 50-yard dash, 50-yard high and low hurdles, quarter mile, half mile, mile, pole vault, high jump, shot put and mile relay.

Other individual winners in last year's Group I indoor meet who will be in action again are Bill Dudrow, also of George Washington, high jumper, and Gresham Hutchings, of Army, low hurdler.

Starred entries of the prep school teams, each a winner in last year's outdoor championship meet, are Bill Whitlock, of Episcopal, quarter-miler; Jon Dilweg, of Episcopal, hurdler, and Bob Mayer, of Woodberry, miler.

Army Boxing Tourney Starts

in the Army, and in the Fort Myer meet.

They cite Howard Williams, the 238-pounder, who's come in from Japan in quest of the heavyweight title. Since he won the Bronze Star in Germany during the war, Williams won 28 out of 30 fights by knockouts. And there's Austin Jones, a Philadelphia middleweight, who's been the Army's world-wide champion for three years.

Promoters, match-makers and managers from all the boxing centers of the Nation will be watching at ringside for the lads who may be the future professional champions. It shoud be a wonderful show.

Tonight's Pairings:

112 POUNDS—Davis (European Command) vs. Lopez (Far Eastern Command).
118 POUNDS—Smith (Fifth Army) vs. Gatica (Fourth Army).
118 POUNDS—Arellana (European Command) vs. Adams (Sixth Army).

Chisox Move Plate Closer to Fence, Nats Should Try It

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Hoping to boost home-run production, the White Sox are going to transplant home plate in Comiskey Park. The present 352-foot foul lines may be shrunk as much as 10 feet by moving the plate forward.

This is the second transfer of home plate in Comiskey Park. It was moved out 14 feet in 1934 with the hope Al Simmons, then newly acquired from Philadelphia, would power the ball into the stands.

Sugar Radio Blanks Glassva In Soccer Play

Mexican Mayor Asks Food for Flood Victims

Los Angeles, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The mayor of Novojoa, Mexico, appealed today for food and blankets to care for 10,000 people made homeless by floods.

The death toll has been reported heavy as flood waters swept hundreds of square miles in the states of Sonora and Sinaloa.

Currency Panic Causes Berliners To Sell Eastmarks

Berlin, Feb. 20 (AP).—A wild currency panic born of reports that the Russians planned a new monetary reform here spent itself today after feverish exchange of millions of marks.

The flight from the Russian-sponsored eastmark subsided and the value of this money as against the Western-sponsored mark rose to its pre-panic rate. This is about four eastmarks for one westmark. Theoretically the two should be equal.

The Communists fought the panic with special radio broadcasts, angry newspaper articles and even police intervention. Police were used to disperse German crowds trying to dump their marks on shopping sprees at the ration-free stores and others swapping money in blackmarket centers.

The panic stemmed from reports that the Russians would change the money in East Germany or at least in Berlin.

Lottery Slips Seized

New York, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Police raided a Bronx print shop early today and found $40,000 worth of lottery slips and printing plates.

DO YOU WANT HIGHER LIQUOR TAXES?

Higher Liquor Taxes means less legitimate business and less revenue to Federal and District Governments. Higher Liquor Taxes means higher prices to you. Star Liquor's Low Price Policy is widely known in Washington and vicinity. We want to continue this policy. We want to continue to pay a living wage to our employes. We do not want to be priced out of business. While other commodities have increased in price since the war, Star Liquor prices have decreased up to 20% or more on Nationally known brands.

It is only fair that the people who pay the taxes should be consulted and given the opportunity to express their opinions. Please fill out the attached form which will be forwarded to the proper Congressional Committee.

Showdown Expected On Proposed Systems To Rate Efficiency

A showdown on efficiency ratings is imminent. It may come this week.

The Civil Service Commission, it was learned, was unable to agree after two lively meetings last week on a system to rate Federal workers. At this point it's said to be hopelessly split on the three plans which are:

(1) The plan advocated by Commissioner Frances Perkins; (2) the Hoover Commission proposal, and (3) the present system.

Miss Perkins is pushing hard for her plan. She's insisting for a commission vote on it. She wants it in effect at once so it can be used for this year's rating period, March 31.

Commissioner James Mitchell and many of the commission's top staff are opposed to the Perkins plan. In the middle is President Harry B. Mitchell who is seeking a compromise.

Briefly, the Perkins plan would rate an employe either satisfactory or unsatisfactory. It also provides that a few topnotch employes could be rated "outstanding." All the various factors which supervisors must check to arrive at the present ratings would be abandoned as too complicated and time-consuming.

This latter provision, incidentally, would fly directly in the face of the Hoover proposal which recommends strongly a new system of "factors" which would bring about a better understanding between employes and their supervisors.

The commission is reported to have been asked to postpone any final decision on a rating system until the Hoover plan is tried out in several Federal agencies on an experimental basis. It's argued that it would be inappropriate to change the rating plan until some parts of the Hoover proposal are given a chance for approval or disapproval.

Incidentally, the commission staff is now reported to believe that the Perkins plan could be drafted to make it legal. The question of its legality prevented a showdown on it weeks ago. Any Government-wide changes must be made soon in order to prepare supervisors prior to the March 31 rating period. That's why the showdown can't be postponed.

DCE's: Another change has been made in the proposed new drive to find jobs for the 4500 DCE's, Displaced Career Employes. Of that number, 3500 are in the field, 1000 here.

The Civil Service Commission is drafting a blunt order to the Federal agencies which will instruct them either (1) to hire the DCE's to fill vacancies they can qualify for, or (2) to fire war service and temporary employes and to replace them with qualified DCE's.

Unless the White House switches signals, the President won't issue the order. The commission first proposed that the President do the job. But the President issued a similar order and took up the matter with his Cabinet some time ago. Besides, the President's advisers take the view that the DCE problem is one the Civil Service Commission should be able to solve on its own initiative and direction.

WALTER L. DISBROW is the new national president of the influential Retirement Federation of Civil Service Employes. Lester Brown of Norfolk is its secretary-treasurer. Both hard-driving officials were put on a full-time basis and they will have offices here at 900 F st. nw. Vice presidents are Ernest Wickels of San Francisco and Patrick Byrnes of Boston.

The independent organization has thousands of members in the Navy Yards and other Federal agencies. It adopted a legislative program at its annual convention here over the weekend which indorses:

A plan to require lay-off of an employe eligible for retirement before a younger employe in a similar job; equal rights for women under the retirement system; survivorship benefits and larger pensions under the 1948 Act, instead of their choice of one of these reforms and retroactive retirement rights for those employes who had at least 25 years of service and who were laid off in a reduction of force.

CENSUS JOBS: Applications for temporary Grade 2 and 3 clerical jobs (no status required) will be accepted by the Census Bureau at Suitland, Md., through February 28. The bureau will hire between 200 and 300 of the applicants to work on its business census. About 1900 already have applied and up to 2500 applicants are expected before the cut-off date.

JOB NEWS: An exam for Treasury enforcement agent ($3727 to $4479) to fill openings here and in nearby States has been announced by Civil Service . . . Applications for the statistical exam ($3727 to $7432) will be accepted by Civil Service through March 30 . . . An exam for operating engineers ($2152 to $3225) is open to fill vacancies at the National Institute of Health at Bethesda . . . Tests for eight types of skilled-rade jobs to fill jobs at the Naval Air Station at Patuxent, Md., and other nearby naval stations are open. They are for carpenter, auto mechanic, packer, painter, sheetmetal worker, typewriter repairman, steam engineman and aircraft electrician.

Apartment Rent Deposit Swindle Laid To Man by 8

GI Student Causes Suspect's Arrest After $50 Fails to Get Him a Home

Fred Swiney, 56, wasn't doing much to alleviate the housing shortage, but his bankroll was growing by leaps and bounds, police said yesterday.

Swiney was arrested Saturday night at his home, 2827 11th st. nw., by Precinct Detective Vernon Culpepper and charged with eight counts of obtaining money by false pretense. He will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

He was arrested on complaint of Paul Ware, 3009 11th st. nw., a former GI, now a student at Howard University.

Ware told police that on February 13 he gave Swiney a $25 deposit on an apartment at 1110 Columbia rd. nw., then two days later handed him another $25.

Finds Swiney Not Connected

When he received no further word from Swiney, Ware said, he went to the apartment and was told Swiney had no connection with its rental.

When Swiney was arrested, Culpepper said, he had in his possession slips of paper containing names and telephone numbers. Police called the numbers and came up with some interesting information.

They talked to William Chisholm, 220 12th pl. nw., who said he had given Swiney $20 on January 22 as a deposit on an apartment somewhere on 13th st. nw. (he didn't remember the exact address.)

They talked to Mrs. Mae Jones, 107 Q st. nw., who said she had handed Swiney $40 on February 1 for an apartment at 1110 Columbia rd. nw., the same address used in the Ware case.

Tells Friends of Service

Mrs. Jones was so pleased with the service that she told Mrs. Alma Ross, 604 5th st. ne. about Swiney. So Swiney, police said, accepted $35 from Mrs. Ross on February 2 for an apartment at 1223 Girard st. nw.

Mrs. Ross said she discovered a short time later that Swiney had no connection with the apartment. She said he returned $10 to her when she went to him and told him a story that her husband had just been appointed to the police force.

Police next contacted Thomas Ashton, 712 Irving st. nw., who said on February 2 he paid Swiney $30 for an apartment at 1233 Girard st. nw.

Next on the list was Mrs. Louise Moten. She told police that on February 9, she gave Swiney $40 as a deposit on an apartment at 1233 Girard st. nw., which Ashton also had in mind.

Gives Up Own Apartment

She said that at the time she gave Swiney the deposit, he took her to the apartment, which is vacant. Several days later, she gave up her apartment of the moment, had her furniture loaded aboard a truck and went to 1233 Girard st. nw. to take over.

When she got there she found the appartment occupied. Mrs. Moten had to store her furniture and is now living temporarily with friends at 1310 12th st. nw.

Last night, Jesse Williams, 739 Harvard st. nw., also lodged a complaint with police against Swiney. He said he gave him $10 late in January as a deposit on a house at 759 Harvard st. nw. Later, he said, he threatened action against Swiney and recovered all but $2.50 of his money.

6-Month-Old Baby Found Smothered

Six-month-old Sidney Martin Baggett smothered early yesterday morning, while he slept between his grandparents in bed at their home, 627 C st. sw., according to police.

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death from asphyxia due to smothering.

The young child was found to be unconscious at 4 a. m., yesterday by his grandmother, Mrs. Genevieve Baggett.

200 Attend Foot Doctors' Symposium

The tenth annual Atlantic Podiatry-Chiropody Symposium got under way yesterday with approximately 200 foot doctors from the District, Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina taking part in the first day's sessions at the Shoreham Hotel.

After an address of welcome by Dr. Maxwell E. Sitzer, president of the D. C. Podiatry Society, which is sponsoring the symposium, the delegates spent the day at lectures and discussions, and visiting exhibits of chiropodical supplies displayed in the foyer to the Shoreham's main ballroom.

Lectures on "office clinical procedures" by Dr. V. Herbert Levin, president of the Philadelphia Chiropody Society, and on X-ray interpretation in chiropodical practice by Dr. Felton O. Gamble, professor of roentgenology, Temple University School of Chiropody, were followed in the evening by an open forum on "Practice Problems"

Highlight of the three-day conference is scheduled at 11 this morning when Dr. Elliot P. Joslin, world-famed diabetes research authority from Boston's Deaconess Hospital, will address a public meeting on the treatment of foot diseases in diabetic sufferers.

About 1000 persons, including members of the D. C. Diabetes Association and the D. C. Lay Society of Diabetics, are expected to attend Dr. Joslin's lecture which will be the only open meeting of the symposium.

Hint of Spring Fills Capital Parks and Zoo

There was a hint of spring in the air yesterday and Washingtonians liked it.

They filled the small parks throughout the city. They flocked to the Zoo. They went to the Potomac Park golf course. Some ventured forth on the Potomac River for sailboating.

The temperatures were balmy and the sun shone. From 2 to 3 p. m., the mercury hovered at a pleasant 65 or 66. The 66 figure, high for the day, was recorded at 3:50 p. m. Low mark was 50 at 6:40 a. m.

The weatherman said yesterday's perfect weather was just an interlude and nothing more. When you awaken this morning, you will find your thermometer down to about 38. The forecast for today is fair and moderately cold with the high near 48.

The Zoo was one of the big attractions yesterday, drawing an estimated crowd of between 35,000 and 45,000.

"Just like Palm Sunday," commented a guard.

Park police reported more persons strolling in the parks than on any Sunday in the past six weeks. Benches were filled in the small neighborhood parks, they said. They also reported that more persons than usual were abroad on the Potomac Park golf course.

Harbor police said the Washington Channel was filled with sailboats. The occasion was the sailboat races sponsored by the Columbia Yacht Club.

Boy Drowns, Six Survive Raft Sinking

2 Harbor Policemen Revive One Youth Pulled Unconscious From Potomac River

A "Tom Sawyer" adventure by seven boys ended in tragedy on the Potomac River yesterday when an improvised raft sank, drowning one youth while another barely escaped with his life.

Drowned was Robert Nicholson, 17, a student at Armstrong High School, who lived with his grandmother, Mrs. Rachael Nicholson, at 502 23d st. nw. His body was recovered by harbor policemen after it had been under water for about an hour.

Rescued after being submerged for several minutes was Raymond Stables, 15, of 2224 Virginia ave. nw. Sergt. Franklin Morrett and Pvt. William T. Hayden of the harbor police pulled Stables unconscious from 8 feet of water with a boat hook and revived him with artificial respiration.

Police said the other youths swam and scrambled to the bank on the Virginia side of the river, when their "raft," a large metal trough used for mixing cement, began to sink about 30 feet from shore.

They were returning from an exploring trip to Roosevelt Island, they said, across the Boundary Channel, when the tragedy occurred.

Harbor Police said they were able to save Stables because they noticed the group of boys when they approached Memorial Bridge, nearly a half-mile away and hastened to the spot.

When they arrived at the scene, Stables was going under water, Sergeant Morrette said, and Nicholson had already gone down. The other youths were safe on the bank.

According to police, those who reached shore safely were: James Beverly, 12, and Mentha Beverly, 15, brothers, who live at 2314 G st. nw.; William Bell, 14, of 529 23rd st. nw.; Ison Young, 15, of 503-A 23rd st. nw., and Albert Jackson, 15, of 529 23rd st. nw.

1950 Budget Book To Itemize Needs Of Maryland U.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 20 (AP).—Governor Lane says he expects the 1950 budget book to include itemized details of University of Maryland appropriations.

The budget book now before the Legislature, for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, gives only lump sums for the university. The institution takes up only three pages of the bulky document.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Delegates last week, and gave the committee a copy of the working budget.

Miss America Visits Here . . .

Miss America and her mother visit here

Miss America Poses Here for Blossom Art

Miss America of 1948, a corn-fed Minnesota farm girl named BeBe Shopp, flew into Washington yesterday and showed a face and figure as warming as the warm weather which accompanied her.

BeBe (Be for Beatrice plus Be for Bella) is here for a three-day visit during which she will be honored by Minnesota's Congressmen and photographed in settings pointing up the forthcoming Washington Cherry Blossom Festival.

Wearing a black silk print dress on her 5-foot 9-inch, 138-pound frame, BeBe was escorted during the day by six ROTC cadets from Georgetown University, eager beavers all.

Before facing photographers on the terrace at the Shoreham Hotel, BeBe sat beside her attractive 45-year-old mother on a sofa and divulged the following vital statistics:

1. No one-and-only, despite plenty of contenders for her heart.

2. A career in radio is a must as soon as her education is complete. She likes radio men.

3. The life of a Miss America is no bed of roses. The fuss is bewildering to an 18-year-old girl raised on a raspberry farm.

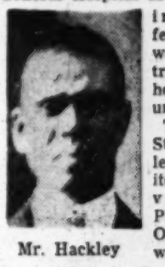
4. Washington gave her the best reception yesterday she has yet had.

5. The thermometer stood at 2 degrees above zero when she left Minnesota yesterday.

When asked how much money the Miss America title was worth these days, she laughingly referred the question to her manager and father. But daddy, it seemed, was kept at home in Minnesota, presumably figuring out her income tax.

Man Injured By Truck Dies In Hospital

A Spencerville, Md., man died yesterday in Montgomery County General Hospital as the result of injuries suffered when he was struck by a truck near his home late Saturday.



Mr. Hackley

The victim was Stewart Hackley, 50, a janitor at the Naval Ordnance Plant, White Oak, Md., who was struck by a truck driven by George C. Wilson of Layhill, Md., Montgomery County police said. The accident occurred on Spencerville rd., about half a mile east of Brown's Corner and a quarter of a mile from Hackley's home.

Police quoted Wilson as saying he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car and did not see Hackley. He said he stopped to investigate when he heard a thud, and found Hackley in the road.

A technical charge of reckless driving was lodged against Wilson, who was released pending a hearing in Silver Spring Police Court.

Gerald Brown, 24, 2709 Sherman ave., nw., was in Freedmen's Hospital last night as the result of being struck by an automobile at Georgia ave. and Harvard st. nw., at 12:20 a. m. Police listed the driver of the car as Frank H. Kirstein, 29, 1430 Tuckerman st. nw.

According to the hospital report, Brown suffered a fractured leg, lacerations of the scalp and possible head injuries.

Two boys were injured at 8:30 a. m. when they were thrown from a panel truck after it collided with a tractor-trailer at 12th and D sts. sw. They were identified as Carlton Branch, 8, 1245 22d st. nw., in Children's Hospital with concussion, and Robert Smith, 10, 1244 22d st. nw., who was treated at Emergency Hospital for an injured hand.

According to police the light truck was driven by John D. Branch, jr., 31, of 1245 22d st. nw., and the trailer by Donald P. Heinlein, 31, of Charlotte, N. C.

M/Sergt. James E. Smith, 29, of Andrews Air Base, was seriously injured Saturday night when he was struck by an auto which police said was driven by Ira Y. Bain, 56, 1102 S. Oakcrest rd., Arlington, at 14th and Chapin sts. nw. Smith was taken to Emergency Hospital with face and head lacerations, internal injuries and a possible neck fracture.

Chest Group to Meet For Budget Discussion

The executive committee of the Community Chest Federation will met Monday at 11:30 a. m. in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co. to act on the recommendations of the budget committee on final allocations of funds for 1949 operations.

Walton Unit to Meet

The Izaak Walton League of Alexandria will meet at 8:30 p. m. today, in the Community Center Building, 1605 Cameron st., Alexandria, to hear a report of the gun range committee and appoint a representative to the Virginia State Division of the league.

Police Seize 2 Brothers In $10,000 Safe Theft

Shoemaker, Waiter Held Under $7500 Bond Each; $5000 Reported in House

Two brothers were arrested early yesterday and charged with housebreaking in connection with the theft last month of a safe containing $10,000 in cash and jewelry.

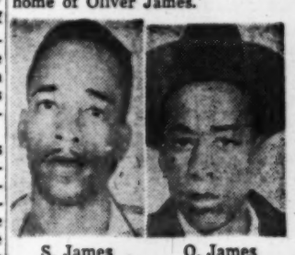
They are Stance W. James, 30, a shoemaker, of 1332 9th st. nw., and Oliver James, 35, a waiter, of 1600 A st. se. They were taken before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence for a Sunday arraignment. He set their bond at $7500 each and ordered them held for action of the grand jury.

The pair are accused of stealing a 400-pound safe containing $8700 in cash and $1300 worth of jewelry early on the morning of January 23 from the home of Richard H. Beckley, 69, a retired detective sergeant of the Metropolitan Police Department, at 1800 New Jersey ave. nw.

$5000 Reported Found

The arrests were made by Detective Sergts. Sam Russell, Irving Lubore and Richard Meissner of the general assignment squad.

They seized Stance James in his car in Northeast Washington at about 3 a. m. At 7:30 a. m., they arrested Oliver James at his home. The detectives said they found almost $5000 and a .22-caliber revolver when they searched the home of Oliver James.



S. James O. James

Beckley, who retired from the police force in 1920 and now operates a billiard parlor at 1213 U st. nw., returned home early on the morning of January 23 and surprised three men loading his safe into the back of a car parked in an alley next to his home.

One of the men, police said, held Beckley at bay with a revolver until the safe was in the car, then the three men jumped in the car and drove off.

When Beckley entered his house, he found the trio had forced his basement door, had disconnected a burglar alarm by pulling down the light switch and had carried the safe from the third floor to the basement and then out to the car.

In addition to the cash, Beckley said, the safe contained a diamond ring, a diamond pin and three watches.

Gaithersburg Firemen Reelect D. C. Pharmacist

Forte H. Sandison, a District pharmacist, has been reelected president of the Gaithersburg and Washington Grove (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department.

A resident of Gaithersburg, Sandison is a pharmacist at Higger's Drugs, Inc., 5015 Connecticut ave.

Other officers of the fire department include Gerald Barbour, vice president; Charles K. Davies, treasurer; Robert Glover, secretary; Charles P. Fox, reelected chief; Jacob Mobley, assistant chief; Wesley Briggs, reelected first captain; Robert Youngkins, second captain; Norman McGaha, elected first lieutenant; LeRoy Frank, elected second lieutenant, and Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, reappointed company surgeon.

Officers of the rescue squad are Reynolds Youngkins, reelected captain; William German, first lieutenant; Raymond Lynch, second lieutenant; Donald Magruder, sergeant, and William Christie, secretary.

Part of Geography Course

Taylor Run Gives GWU Youths Flood Control Problem

Armed with plane tables and surveyors' poles, the students spend Tuesday and Thursday afternoons preparing a contour map of the four-acre briar-covered park site.

They will determine where land shall be filled and plan the location of a bridge, wading pool, ball diamond, parking lot and play area for small children.

Taylor Run, which cuts through the property, has eroded the banks and presented them with a flood-conrtol problem. Drains must be set in for the soggy soil.

Alexandria's recreation department and the city's Junior Chamber of Commerce, which have hopes of turning the neglected land into a model play center, called in the university planners to provide the blueprints.

While most planners now are engineers, Jewell believes it is more logical to have geographers who will integrate planning with environment. He says solving a mechanical problem is not always enough. Nature as a whole must be taken into account.

That geography is more than just a study of boundary lines is shown by the university catalogue, which lists 20 courses.

Map drafting is taught in the cartography laboratory. Other courses deal with geomorphology (evolution of earth forms), weather, soil, the effect of geographic factors in the growth of nations and the relation between nations, and man's economic activities as an adjustment to physical and cultural environments.

Jewell, who served with the Navy during the war, believes that war travel and job opportunities are behind the growing interest in geography courses.

Demand has reached the point that the university this year is offering a major in geography leading to both bachelor's and master's degrees. Academic students, majoring in English and history, also are signing up for classes.

"More and more geography is considered one of the disciplines essential for an educated person," Jewell said.

Tuesday Rites Scheduled for Dr. S. M. Pierre

Funeral services for Dr. Samuel M. Pierre, 76, one of Washington's oldest Negro physicians, who died Saturday in Emergency Hospital, will be held Tuesday at 1 p. m. at Peoples Congregational Church, 624 M st. nw. Burial will be in Harmony Cemetery.

A lifelong Washington resident and member of the Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., Dr. Pierre was born the son of Samuel Pierre, a Bureau of Engraving employe, and Mrs. Mary Bates Pierre, an elementary school teacher here.

His interest in medicine whetted while driving a horse and buggy for a white doctor, Dr. Pierre skipped high school and entered Howard University. In 1893, he was graduated from Howard's medical school after having first received a degree in liberal arts.

Dr. Pierre maintained an office at 2124 L st. nw. until two years ago when ill health forced him to restrict his practice to old patients received at his home, 3033 11th st. nw.

A founder of the Young Men's Protective League and one of the early secretaries of the Medico-Chirurgical Society, Dr. Pierre also served as trustee of Union Methodist Church and was a member of the Pleasant Plains Civic Association and the 12th st. YMCA.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gonevia Pierre, and two children, Samuel, jr., and Mrs. Mary Anderson, both teachers in Jersey City, N. J.

Five Local Priests Invested With Robes of Monsignori

Five priests of the Washington Archdiocese were invested with the purple robes of monsignori yesterday by the Most Rev. Patrick O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

The five priests received the robes of the household of Pope Pius XII at services held in St. Matthews Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw. More than 1800 persons packed the church to witness the honor-conferring program.

The priests vested with the robes of Domestic Prelate were the Right Rev. Monsignors Henry F. Graebenstein, pastor of Holy Comforter Church; William E. Kelly, pastor of St. Martin's church and Francis J. Loughran, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Upper Marlboro, Md.

Those vested with the robes of Papal Chamberlain were Very Rev. Monsignors James E. Cowhig, chancellor of the archdiocese and John J. Spence, director of education of the archdiocese.

In a sermon preceding the investiture ceremony, the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, vicar general of the Washington Archdiocese, said "the honor conferred on the Monsignori today is not only a reward for service but an incentive to greater devotion to the cause to which they have consecrated their lives.

"In conferring the honors it is not the intention of the Church to cater to their vanity by providing an attractive vestment . . . rather it is the intention to provide a symbol that will be a challenge to their souls. The purple honors the prelate only insofar as the prelate honors the purple, whether in the shade of the altar or the shadow of the scaffold."

Following the investiture, the Archbishop congratulated the new monsignori. "May God spare you years," he said, "to enjoy your honors, an honor that is a badge and opportunity to serve both God and our country."

Richard L. Trice Dies at 73; Retired White House Guard

Richard Lewis Trice, 73, who served 26 years as a member of the Metropolitan Police Department and a White House guard prior to his retirement in 1942, died early yesterday morning at Mount Alto Hospital, following a long illness.

A native of Lorton, Va., Mr. Trice was the son of the late Luther R. Trice and Mrs. Mary Agnes Trice. He attended Lorton, Va. schools and business schools in the District.

In 1898, he volunteered for service in the Spanish American War and served both in Cuba and in the Philippines. Following his discharge, about 1902, he served a short while as a District fireman before he entered the police department. His early "beats" were in "Foggy Bottom" and as foot patrolman from 5th to 7th sts., between G and D sts. nw.

Mr. Trice was the first officer to be stationed at the Old District Building, 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., when it was opened, and later was in charge of all incoming police messages and reports there.

During President Harding's Administration, Mr. Trice was appointed to the White House Guard.

Mr. Trice was a member of the Mason's George Washington Lodge of Alexandria, a Shriner and the Kalipos Grotto. For many years he was secretary of the Sunday school of the Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, 11th and K sts. nw.

He is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Margaret E. Plaskett, Miss Ethel Trice, Mrs. M. E. Tyers., all of Occoquan, Va., and Mrs. R. C. Smith, 5912 14th st. nw. A brother, Wade H. Trice, also a District policeman and a White House guard, died in 1942.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

O'Leary Dies; Former Owner Of Restaurant

Maurice O'Leary, 70, retired restaurant operator, died Saturday night, following a brief illness.

A native of County Kerry, Ireland, Mr. O'Leary came to this country in his teens to join two of his eight brothers, the late William J. O'Leary and Jeremiah J. O'Leary, in Washington.

Later, he moved to New York City, where he was in the restaurant buisness for many years.

He retired here two years ago, 14 years after the death of his wife, Esther, and had been living at 3301 7th st. ne.

Mr. O'Leary is survived by the following nieces and nephews:

Second Luncheon Honoring Man's Fiancee Tried His Mother's Nerves Too Far; She Blew Up; Shock Made Hostess' Mother Ill

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My son Fred is engaged to marry a girl whose aunt recently gave a bridal luncheon for her. My mother, my two daughters and I were invited. After luncheon the girl parked herself in a corner with a friend of hers and spent the afternoon there.

The other guests being older women, my daughters felt "left out." They are college students and belong to a number of organizations, but they couldn't make her out. They thought she was very ignorant. The same thing happened the following week, when another luncheon was given in Dorothy's honor.

This time, to make matters worse, she parked in a corner with the hostess. After the other guests left and I was waiting for my son, Dorothy left my daughters sitting and went off to speak again with the hostess. I felt as if my nerves were all tied up, as if I were going to explode.

Mother Feels on Defensive

I ASKED Dorothy what was the matter, that she had to spend the entire time off to herself. She started to cry, and just as my son came in she started to tell me I had insulted her in front of her "dearest friends,"—meaning the hostess' family. The hostess, who heard it all, told me I had a guilty conscience.

I tried to explain that I want to be a mother to Dorothy, but if she feels as she does it can't be done. Well, I apologized and she said she was sorry she jumped at me. Now my son, who thinks Dorothy is always right, tells me the hostess' mother has a sick spell, from aggravation, after the party. Please state your opinion, was I entirely wrong? E. R.

Mother's Heart Closed to Girl

DEAR E. R.: It was entirely wrong, of course, to make a scene with Dorothy the goat and your hostess as referee, at a luncheon given in her honor; and it's small wonder the hostess' mother took to her bed after "entertaining" such strange company.

Your heart isn't open to Dorothy. She knows that; she knows she can't please you. Unconsciously you hate her, simply because Fred loves her, idealizes her and wants to marry her. For that reason, and no other, you've been courting friction, wearing a chip on your shoulder the size of a fire-log, from which she retreats instinctively.

Naturally there is tension in the air at these parties honoring Dorothy, which "throw" her at your head as Fred's fiancee. The tension is felt by all present as they sense your antipathy to the honor guest, registered in stand-offish behavior coldly dittoed by your daughters.

All realize, too, that Fred's female camp more or less has to figure in prenuptial parties for the bride; and that it's up to you or your mother to break the ice with Dorothy at these affairs—since her social cue, as honor guest where older women are present, is to be quietly self-effacing and speak when spoken to.

Girl's Entitled to Protect Self

IF THERE were mostly older women present at the first party, and none seized Dorothy for a felicitous chat, and your self-satisfied daughters made no cordial move in her direction, she was properly protecting herself in sitting out the afternoon with a sympathetic ally.

It was the hostess' business, if she felt like it, to coax the ladies into changing conversation groups after luncheon; but perhaps she'd already decided the affair was too "sunk" to bother about, due to your glacial aura. Certainly it wouldn't have been seemly of Dorothy to flit about, plucking elbows as if offering treat to the company.

The same applies to the second luncheon, where again the proposition of honoring Dorothy stuck in your throat; where you almost suffocated from dislike of feeling "second fiddle" to her; and where, after keeping her at arm's length by your attitude, you framed excuse to blow your top by accusing her of snooting you. Bravo to the hostess who nailed the humbug. If you aren't too old to learn, read "Their Mothers' Sons" by Dr. Edward Strecker (Lippincott, publishers) and try to grow. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

Grandma's Common Sense

It isn't uncommon to hear someone say about a new book on bringing up children or a child-study group, "Why do we need such newfangled ideas? After all, what's wrong with common sense like grandma used to have?"

To be sure, some people do acquire wisdom from life experience. My 88-year-old grandmother is one of them. But I know, as I am sure you do, many another person whose "common sense" is made up of a lot of misinformation and prejudice. Someone has said that much of the sound information we have regarding children and families is organized common sense. Of course, it's more than that, but there's a good deal in the idea.

In other words, not too many of us can count for sure on developing common sense through our own experience alone. If we are wise, we will make use of the experiences of friends and neighbors as well as our own that we have accumulated. It is most important, however, not to accept either new or old ideas uncritically. Neighbors, friends, and relatives may have some very queer notions about human behavior. But so do some of the "experts." The safest course is to check ideas and practices with our own experience and with those of parents in whom we have confidence.

Goodbyes Said Again to Honduran, Indian Envoys

By Marie McNair

Parties go on apace fo rthe retiring Honduran Ambassador and Senora de Caceres, and another popular diplomatic couple—the Indian Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau, all scheduled to leave "our town" this week.

Yesterday Dr. and Senora de Caceres were honor guests at a noonday breakfast given by Mr. and Mrs. H. Harland Crowell, followed that party up with a dinner in their honor given by the Guatemalan Ambassador and Senora de Gonzalez-Arevalo.

A punch bowl brimming with whisky sours was emptied by the time platters of scrambled eggs, country sausage and kidney stew, went the rounds at the Crowell's buffet.

Very much missed at the party was the Honduran Ambassador who is a victim of flu and was ordered to stay at home.

Among those there to say au revoir to Senora de Caceres were the Guatemalan Ambassador and his Senora; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina, who wore a spring print; the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, without her husband, and Mrs. Eugene Cox without hers.

Spring Hat

The former French Premier, Camille Chautemps, and Mme. Chautemps with clusters of tiny French flowers on her pale mauve hat, were others in the gathering and also there were Senora de Copello, Anis Azer of the Egyptian Embassy; Mrs. Leslie P. Jacobs and Gen. Robert Blake, a twosome these days; Col. Felipe Munilla, and Senora de Munilla who poured coffee; Mr. and Mrs. Augusta Boas, Mrs. William F. O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Colbert, Miss Pearl Edwards, and Cesar Caceres, son of the guest of honor. Mrs. Robert Valverde of New York, who's visiting Mr. and Mrs. Crowell, and Mrs. Wintemute Sloan, were also in the group.

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Nieto del Rio, the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, were among those at the dinner at the Guatemalan Embassy last night and others asked to bid the Caceres' farewell were the Haitian Ambassador, Joseph Charles; the Costa Rican Ambassador and Senora de Esquivel, Paul Daniels, Director of the Office of American Republic Affairs of the State Department, and Mrs. Daniels; Mr. and Mrs. John McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Loving and Mario Bermudez.

Long Day for Raus

Yesterday Sir Benegal and Lady Rama Rau started their day at 11:30 at a sherry party given for them by F. M. De Mello, Director of the Indian Information Service, and Mme. De Mello at their home in Wesley Heights. In India Sunday is the day for entertaining, a mid-morning party is a long established custom, and friends start out early to call.

Lady Rama Rau brought along her tiny granddaughter, Asha; the Roy Thurstons brought their baby daughter and with Roy, the De Mellos youngest son, the very young set had a party of its own.

Vera De Mello, 15-year-old daughter of the hosts, one of the very few girls from India to pass examinations to Bryn Mawr where she'll study next year, was there to assist, and also in the family circle was 13-year-old Margaret.

J. P. Singh, president of the Indian League of America, was here from New York, and in the group of 60 or more were Mr. and Mrs. S. G. McFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Shartrand, Lothrop Stoddard, and Mrs. Stoddard who came in a sari, and members of the Indian Embassy staff.

Luncheon by the Burmese Ambassador, U So Nyun, at the Carlton Hotel for the retiring Indian Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau, was followed by cocktails at the home of the Military and Air Attache of the Indian Embassy Brig. D. Chaudhuri, and Mme. Chaudhuri at their home in Chevy Chase.

Luncheon, Cocktails

Luncheon guests who were at the cocktail party too, included the Pakistan Ambassador, M. A. H. Ispahani; the Ceylonese Ambassador, G. C. S. Corea; the Ambassador of Iran, Hussein Ala; the Minister of Saudi Arabia, Asad Al-Faqih; the Charge d'Affaires of Siam, Mom Chao Kridakon; Brigadier Chaudhuri and the First Secretary of the Indian Embassy, I. S. Chopra. Also, Joseph Satterthwaite, Elbert Mathews, Edward Dahl, Richard Usher, Raymond Muir and Raymond Hare.

Among others who stopped by at the Chaudhuri's house for a cocktail were Maj. Gen. John Chapman, head of the Australian Military Mission; Mrs. Chapman, and their daughter, Betty; Air Commodore J. L. Findlay of the New Zealand Embassy and Mrs. Findley, Group Capt. R. C. Jonas of the British Embassy, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas B. Inglis, Maj. Gen. Alexander R. Bolling, and Capt. and Mrs. Floyd Ferris.

Heileman, Chief of Transportation, will be the guest speaker. Stewart Gordon, talented young pianist, son of Lt. Col. Lynell F. Gordon, T. C. (G.S.C.) and Mrs. Gordon, will play for the group after luncheon.

Mrs. Ralph Glasgow is in charge of all arrangements. Assisting are: Mrs. N. H. Vissering, Mrs. D. M. Jacques, Mrs. R. W. Humphreys, Mrs. R. F. D'Elousa, Mrs. G. C. Hess, Mrs. T. L. Harrigan, Mrs. J. W. Foster, Mrs. J. J. Mann, jr., and Mrs. H. E. Taylor. Anyone who has not yet made a reservation may do so by calling Mrs. Harold E. Taylor, TEmple 8190.

Miss Emily Arnold, Fiance, Mr. Clancey, Feted by Mr. Freer

Miss Emily Arnold and Halsey Parkman Clancy, who will be married Saturday in the Chapel at Fort Myer, were honor guests at Barry Freer's cocktail party yesterday at his home.

Mr. Freer will be an usher at the wedding and the guests included mostly other attendants and young friends of the couple.

Other parties on the books for the young bride-elect, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, and her fiance include Miss Virginia Timberman's cocktail party Wednesday at the home of her parents, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas S. Timberman.

And on the same day Mrs. Arnold will have a tea for her friends who have helped with the wedding plans. On Thursday Mrs. William E. Carraway has planned a luncheon for the young people and Mrs. Arnold will have the bride's friends in for tea. Thursday evening the bridegroom will be host at a bachelor party while Miss Jane Adams entertains at the traditional "spinsters' dinner."

Miss Monica Gaillard will be hostess at a luncheon on Friday for the couple. And following the rehearsal Friday, Mrs. G. O. Broun, Mrs. Arnold's sister, and Miss Janey C. Cocke, Mrs. Arnold's aunt, both from St. Louis, Mo., will give a dinner for the wedding party. Saturday, the day of the wedding, Mrs. Raymond S. McLain will entertain at a luncheon for the wedding party.

Son to Croghans

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Croghan are being congratulated on the birth of a son, their second child, on Wednesday at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Croghan is the former Miss Eileen Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin. The baby will be christened John Harris Croghan. Mr. and Mrs. Croghan's other child is Monica, aged 15 months.

Caffreys Hosts At Home Fete In Alexandria

Col. and Mrs. Charles G. Caffrey entertained at cocktails yesterday at their home in Alexandria, for a group from congressional, service and resident circles.

This New Coffee Flavor Makes Early Morning Angels

It turns Bears into Dears...it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

Yes, it's "angel-making"—this wonderful new Chase & Sanborn blend! "What's in it?" people ask!

The answer is Selecciones (pronounced seleck-see-o-nays). That's the Spanish for selected...some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body . . . others selected mainly for perfecting flavor. The flavor coffees in this heavenly new blend are hand-selected 1-2-three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, pedigreed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

WONDERFUL COFFEE IN 2 SECONDS

THE LATEST
—FASHION FLASH—

"SLENDER SILHOUETTE RETURNING IN FRENCH AND U. S. DESIGN" says famous fashion expert! To go on—"One thing I notice as I read the New York and Paris releases that come to my desk is the importance of the slender silhouette." Of course it is the French influence but what can we do about it?

Well there is one thing you can do about it. The Tarr System which is famous from coast to coast for remolding the feminine figure has a special three month course including an unusual slimming massage, together with six other proven methods what guarantees reduction in pounds and inches in each visit. If you start now you can positively have the figure, the new fashions (and always the smart one) will demand. The Tarr System does it the same way they do it in Hollywood where they are under contract to keep hundreds of Hollywood people trim, slim and fit.

Procedure for Guest At Formal Reception

My husband and I are invited to a wedding and reception in the very near future. This is my first attendance at a reception and I do not know how to conduct myself. Since I do not know the bride or the bridegroom, please tell me the proper thing to say to them when being received. I am really ashamed of my ignorance and hope you can help me. H. B. C.

First, here are a few simple pointers on the usual procedure for guests at a fairly formal wedding and reception:

On entering the church, wait until one of the ushers comes up to you. He may ask if you are friends of the bride or of the bridegroom, as the two groups are usually seated on opposite sides of the church. He will then offer you his arm and you will put your hand inside it to be escorted down the aisle. Your husband will follow as the usher shows you both to a seat. During the ceremony, follow the lead of those in front of you as to when to stand, kneel or sit.

When you arrive at the reception you will probably be greeted by the bride's mother. She may simply shake your hand and say, "How do you do" before you go on to the receiving line. However, if time permits and you are unknown to her, introduce yourself and your husband. If your husband knows her and you do not, he will make the introductions. If the bridegroom's mother is standing next to her, shake hands with her, too, whether you are introduced or not. Then join the line of guests "congratulating" the bride and bridegroom.

Actually, it is proper to congratulate only the bridegroom and to wish the bride much happiness instead. Again, if your husband knows the couple, he will introduce you to them. If you are both unknown to them, give your name as you shake hands. Smile and voice your congratulations. You might also make some pleasant remark about what a lovely wedding it was or something of the sort, but do not hold up the line with a lengthy conversation.

Greet others in the receiving line briefly, following the lead of those ahead of you. After this, if you see friends of your own, join them. Otherwise, the best thing to do is to make your way slowly to the table where refreshments are being served. While you are standing about after being served, it is perfectly proper to make pleasant, casual conversations with those nearby. Otherwise, you and your husband can simply chat with each other.

The phrase "Be youself" is pretty overworked, but it's still good advice at an affair such as this. Once there, don't worry for fear you're doing the wrong thing. Take your mind off yourself, be as natural and charming as you can, and simply enjoy the occasion.

How do I remove a spot, probably gravy and slight lipstick, also wrinkles from a lime green velveteen dress? H. A. O.

Sponge the stain with carbon tetrachloride, working from the back of the fabric as well as the front. As you sponge the pile side, use a light motion so as not to mash down the pile any more than necessary. Place an absorbent pad underneath the stain as you sponge. If this doesn't completely remove the grease, dust an absorbent powder into the pile, let stand to absorb grease and brush away. The carbon tetrachloride will probably remove the lipstick too.

The dress can be pressed by placing it reverse side up on a heavily-padded ironing board, sponging it with a wet cloth to moisten and pressing with a hot iron.

PETUNIA!

You can have the drumsticks
With my blessing

Just be sure you leave me
Lots of dressing!

But you needn't roast a chicken to have dressing, Petunia! Prepare your favorite dressing recipe—bake in a ring mold—fill center with creamed left-over meat. Thrifty too!

Try Meeting The Designer Halfway

By Ida Jean Kain

FASHION DESIGNERS use all the tricks of the trade skillfully to whittle the middle, for that's a young figure. Meet the designers halfway and you'll have a really young and supple figure.

But get started with the right muscles. Instead of regarding the waist as a definite line, realize that waist slimming depends on the network of muscles which wrap around the midriff. Here's a test that tells where the slimming must start . . .

With thumb and forefinger encircling the waist at the side-front, spread apart the remaining three fingers on each hand, fan-shaped, spanning the side-front of the abdomen. Pull snugly up with the abdominal muscles and press gently in with the spread fingers. There—that's where the waist starts to spread.

These side-front muscles, called the external obliques, span up and out from the major abdominal muscles, wrap around the sides of the midriff and attach into the lower eight ribs. Beneath these are the internal obliques with fibers running across those of the outer muscles.

Naturally when this mesh of muscles that band the waist lose tone and bulk out, the waist widens . . . it's all part of the middle spread. But it's nice to know that tone in these muscles, because of their curved position around the side-front of the figure, helps to slim the entire midsection. Since they do all that, the following exercises are well worth taking . . .

POSITION: Standing on knees, arms stretched up over head.

MOVEMENT: Holding the upstretch, bend to the right side as you sit down to the left side of the legs. Still holding the stretch, come up to knees again and bend to the left as you sit down to the right side of the legs. Five times will be ample as a starter. Later work up to 10 or 15 counts.

POSITION: Standing on knees, knees wide apart, arms stretched straight out at sides, shoulder level. Pull up slim through the middle . . . keep shoulders easy.

Many Things Make Infants Spit Up Food

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is very easy for a young baby to spit up food. This happens when the baby is joggled about soon after a feeding, or if, perchance, he overloads his stomach by a few ounces. Then the extra comes spilling back.

Real vomiting must be attributed to some factors in the diet which are not right for this particular child. Rich milk is not well borne by the average child and if his formula is prepared with creamy milk the result may be distress and vomiting.

The curd of cow's milk is often difficult for the baby's stomach to digest. The acids of the stomach are not as powerful as those of the calf for whom this food was intended. Babies who suffer from protein indigestion may vomit back large chunks of what looks like tough, cottage cheese.

Too much sugar in the formula may result in the baby vomiting a thin, sourish fluid. It is always well to compare the amount of sugar being used with the amount of a baby of this particular age and weight needs in the 24 hours.

All of these conditions are capable of change. Milk with a lower percentage of cream may bring about a reduction in the daily vomiting. The protein of the milk may be made more digestible by boiling the milk, or by using a canned or powdered milk. Or, lactic acid may be added to the formula to help the stomach in its task of digesting the protein.

When the baby vomits in a forcible manner, this may not be influenced by food.

This type of vomiting should be brought to the immediate attention of the baby's doctor. This is due most often to a physical malformation or a pinching of the muscle which leads from the stomach into the small intestine.

It may be helped by the feeding of thickened foods, or by the use of drugs which relax the tight muscle, or it may have to be adjusted by an operation. Quite often it is outgrown before this last drastic measure needs to be taken. But it does not profit by changes from one formula to another as do other forms of vomiting and needs prompt attention so that the baby will not lose so much of its precious nutrition.

Curfew by Consent

If your daughter belongs to a sorority or club and there is constant arguments as to the time she be home from social affairs, why not contact the other mothers and have a general agreement as to the time the girls should be home. There will be no difficulty if the curfew is the same throughout the group.

Pacific Isles Prospering, U. N. Is Told

Lake Success, Feb. 20 (NYHT.). The United States gave a glowing account to the United Nations today of economic and social conditions in the former Japanese-mandated islands now administered by the Americans under a strategic trusteeship agreement.

It was the first detailed picture of American rule since the Japanese were driven from the Pacific nearly four years ago, and it asserted that the 60,000 natives in the islands are now far healthier and more prosperous and more free than they were when the United States took over.

The islands, scattered over three million square miles in the western Pacific, include the Marshall, Caroline and Mariana groups. Administratively they are divided into seven districts and governed by a United States Navy civil administration. They were placed under American trusteeship in an agreement approved by the U. N. Security Council in April of 1947.

Comdr. Lee M. Duke, of the Washington office of the Naval administration of the islands, summarized the report by saying that a policy of encouraging native self-government is paying dividends, and that great progress has been made in education.

The native population generally is rushing to learn English, he said, and the administration is doing its best to persuade the natives to maintain their own languages, customs and folklore, learning English as a foreign language.

Under the terms of the agreement with the United Nations, the United States can close off any or all of the islands to international inspection for strategic reasons. So far, only Bikini and Eniwetok, in the Marshalls, have been so designated, and the Americans emphasized today that United Nations inspectors would be welcome at any time in the non-restricted areas.

U. S. Bureau Sees Room for More Women Scientists

There is plenty of room for more lady scientists in the United States, the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department said yesterday.

All that's needed, it said, is for women scientists to keep up "the capable performance already associated with them" and for people who hire scientists to be open-minded.

The bureau reported there were less than 15,000 women in scientific work in 1947, compared with 500,000 men. It quickly added that this did not mean the ladies haven't helped the cause of science.

Housing Industry Can Build Million Homes, Says Foley

Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley said yesterday the housing industry could build one million homes this year if all segments of the industry work together.

But to achieve that goal the industry will have to cut costs, he said.

Meanwhile the Federal Housing Administration reported that applications for FHA housing loans reached 51,437 in January, highest for any month since March, 1948. The loan applications, regarded as a rough index to building plans, were up 21.5 per cent from December.

Cities Seek New Taxes As Operating Costs Rise

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—Cities faced with rising costs of operating, are pacing less reliance on real estate and personal property taxes as sources of income, the municipal finance officers association says.

The association reported yesterday a survey of 503 United States and Canadian cities showed a 33 per cent increase in non-property tax revenue during the past two years.

Most of the new taxes were levied on admissions, incomes and sales.

Smokers Held Seeking Lower-Priced Cigars

Cheaper stogies are staging a comeback. This was revealed yesterday in an Agriculture Department report on the tobacco supply.

It reported that Americans will smoke about the same number of cigars this year, but will cut down on the higher-priced weed in favor of the more economical varieties.

Tydings Sees Trial As Attack on Belief

Baltimore, Feb. 20 (AP).—The trial of Cardinal Mindszenty in Hungary and of a group of Protestant clergymen in Bulgaria is not an attack upon any particular religion, but upon all belief in God, Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said today.

In his weekly radio broadcast, Tydins said he had "never been able to understand how any man, endowed with even a modicum of intelligence, a shred of conscience or a tiny spark of the love of liberty, could voluntarily join an organization which had for its purpose the substitution of slavery under communism for freedom under democracy."

8 Hurt in $100,000 Fire

Boston, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Fire Commissioner Russel S. Codman, jr., and seven firemen were injured today while battling an explosion-punctuated blaze that caused $100,000 damage to a suburban business block.

Auto, Truck Registrations Top 4.5 Million

Detroit, Feb. 20 (AP).—New motor vehicle registrations in the United States last year numbered 4,526,126, R. L. Polk & Co. reported today.

The company, official statisticians for the automotive industry, said the total included 3,490,952 new passenger cars and 1,035,174 trucks.

The passenger car total compared with 3,167,231 new registrations in 1947 and 3,731,166 in 1941.

The 1948 new truck registrations represented the first time licensing of new commercial units passed the million mark in one year.

Polk reported, however, that the new truck sales, which reached a peak last April, have been declining slowly.

O'Mahoney Hits Big Business on Inflation Stand

Big business apparently is more interested in avoiding tax increases than in stopping continued inflation, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said yesterday.

He said in a statement that the testimony of business leaders at round table economic discussions last week before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee which he heads, also showed they "prefer to risk a resumption of price increases" rather than give President Truman authority to control prices and wages.

He said it was significant that "representatives of agriculture and labor were, on the whole, favorably inclined toward Government action while spokesmen of industry were uniformly opposed."

Agriculture and labor, he said, "are the two groups which feel the brunt of the present change—farmers and ranchers in price drops and labor in unemployment. Business profits on the other hand seem to be running at high levels."

Rent Hearings Slighted Tenants, ALP Charges

The American Labor Party yesterday accused the House Banking Committee of refusing to give "representatives of tenant groups" a chance to testify at hearings on extension of rent controls.

In a message to speaker Sam Rayburn, the party, headed by Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) said the committee has given landlord representatives "a field day" but has refused a hearing to the New York tenant council on rent and housing "and others."

Falling Haylift Bale Kills Utah Sheepherder

Salt Lake City, Feb. 20 (AP).—A bale of hay dropped from an Air Force haylift plane struck and killed a Utah sheepherder today.

Public relations officials at Hill Air Base, Ogden, Utah, identified the victim as Willard Peacock, about 60, of Salina, Utah.

Steel Team Coming to U. S.

London, Feb. 20 (AP).—A British steel industry team will leave for the United States March 9 to study American production methods, it was announced today.

Weizmann Urges End to Fund Dispute

New York, Feb. 20 (NYHT.).—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of Israel, appealed to all American Jews to end the dispute over fund-raising which has caused bitter controversy in a number of important Jewish organizations.

Weizmann urged all Jews to support Henry Morgenthau, jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, as chairman of the 1949 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal, which seeks 250 million dollars to help Israel absorb displaced Jews from Europe and for similar purposes.

Selection of Morgenthau, and more significant, of Henry Montor as executive director of the campaign, caused the resignations of Dr. Abba Hillel Silver and Dr. Emanuel Neumann from the Jewish Agency executive, top zionist body between world Zionist Congresses.

The Silver-Neumann group and its supporters, had brought about the resignation of Montor from both the United Jewish Appeal and the United Palestine Appeal, one of the three major bodies for which the United Jewish Appeal raises money. Morgenthau refused to accept the chairmanship of the UJA unless Montor were reinstated.

A compromise was worked out in the Jewish Agency providing for tripartite administration of the United Jewish Appeal, with Montor to act as Morgenthau's representative and other individuals to speak for the other forces within UJA. Morgenthau rejected that compromise and an offer by Dr. Silver to fly to Florida to discuss the matter further. Finally, the Jewish Agency executive voted to accept Morgenthau's insistence that Montor be placed directly in charge of all fund-raising. When this was done, Dr. Silver and Dr. Neumann resigned from the agency.

Railroads Have 96,464 Freight Cars on Order

The Association of American Railroads said yesterday the railroad industry had a backlog of orders for 96,464 new freight cars as of February 1.

On the same date, there were outstanding orders for 1563 new locomotives, the largest total for this date on record. The association reported that installations of new freight cars in January totaled 7533 compared with 8240 installed in January.

Methodist Bishop Cites Red Movement in Asia

Chicago, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Bishop Ralph S. Cushman of the St. Paul area of the Methodist Church has reported a "Communist offensive moving across southeastern Asia," church officials said today.

Cushman, in a letter sent from Manila, said Christianity "must not call for missionary reinforcements or miss the opportunity of a century."

The bishop is touring the Orient to observe Methodist missionary outposts for church officials.

Argentines Hit Soviet

Buenos Aires, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Leaders of the Argentine Socialist Party tonight adopted a resolution condemning "Soviet totalitarism" and calling for a purge of pro-Soviet members from the party's ranks.

Spouse Must Again Woo Bride Who Lost Memory After Blow

Seattle, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—A 26-year-old bride of three months came home from the hospital today to a complete stranger—a husband who will have to woo her all over again.

Last week Mrs. Hertis Sugden was struck on the head by a 12-pound davenport cushion thrown from a theater balcony as she watched a movie with her husband, Will, 33.

Doctors told the husband that time and patience, or another shock, will cure his wife of amnesia.

At first her memory was completely gone, but her husband and the doctors have helped her remember up to 1944.

"I just can't believe that I'm married," she said. "I'm a Grade A mechanic at the Boeing airplane plant."

Mrs. Sugden was trying to understand that she does not have to go to work tomorrow and help build B-29s. She can't believe that the war is over.

She blushed when her husband told her of their romance and that they had been married last November 23.

"Oh, I just can't imagine!" she said, "I keep wishing I could love him like he loves me. He's so very good to me."

"But I don't like men—I know I don't."

Sugden just shrugged and smiled patiently.

"She likes me already," he said hopefully. "Yesterday she looked at me and said 'oh, dear, what if you had a long beard or were big and fat? It could be so terrible.'"

Montgomery Agog Over Best Body for Planning Functions

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

The question of who should have authority over important planning functions in mushrooming Montgomery County last week had citizens searching for the answers in a maze of conflicting charges.

At odds over the question are the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, on the one hand, and the recently elected county council and the county's delegation to the Legislature on the other.

On opposite sides of the firing line are the solidly Republican legislative delegation to the Maryland General Assembly and the equally solid Democratic planning commission.

Siding firmly with the Republican legislators on the question is the county council—not aligned with either major political party.

Agency Is Big Issue

Stated simply, the issue revolves around this question: Should the county government direct zoning and planning functions of the county or should the planning commission, a State agency, perform such functions?

At stake are the following functions now exercised by the MNCPPC: zoning advisory authority, building and electrical inspections, subdivision planning, master planning of streets and highways, and filing of subdivision plats.

Verbal fireworks during the past week were precipitated by introduction in the General Assembly, by the Republican delegation, of bills aimed at transferring the above functions to the county council. Under the proposal the planning commission would still administer and acquire park lands but would be stripped of most administrative and legislative authority.

Various Arguments

Following are the pro and con arguments in the fight.

Opponents of the legislation say Montgomery can best attain orderly development if planning is exercised by the MNCPPC with its expert technical staff concentrating on that phase of governmental administration.

It is imperative, they add, that bi-county authority now possessed by the MNCPPC remain in effect to insure efficient planning in nearby areas of both Prince Geores and Montgomery.

In a blast at the proposal last week, J. Bond Smith, general counsel for the MNCPPC and nominal head of the county's Democratic Party, charged the county council and legislative delegation seek "complete destruction of bi-county planning."

The statement by Smith declared: "It continues to be this commission's considered opinion that none of them (the controversial bills) is necessary or desirable from the standpoint of the public interest."

Creation Is Cited

Supporters of the pending legislation argue that the MNCPPC was created in 1927 by the General Assembly as a park acquisition agency principally because it was necessary for the commission to operate as a subdivision of the State rather than the county in order to take advantage of Federal funds.

"Through the years, additional functions have been vested in the commission until now the commission exercises . . . many of the functions of local government." Delegate John R. Reeves, author of the proposed legislation, said recently.

"The result is that although the people of Montgomery County have very strongly indicated their desire for home rule, the functions of government are divided between the independent agencies appointed by the Governor and the elected officials of the county responsible solely to the people," he declared.

Reeves cited a report by Brookings Institution, following a study of the county in 1941, in which it was recommended that planning functions be transferred from the MNCPPC to the county government.

1946 Campaign Pledge

Also in the fray was Chairman Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., of the legislative delegation. In seeking the transferral of powers, Lofstrand explained the delegation was carrying out a 1946 campaign pledge to "return to Montgomery County the functions of local government which had been wrongfully usurped by various independent agencies appointed by the Governor."

Lofstrand denied that the contemplated move would interfere with bi-county planning. The commission itself in 1947 established a separate office and maintains separate records for each county, he pointed out.

28 Pastors Ask End of Maryland's 'Jim Crow' Law

Baltimore, Feb. 20 (AP).—Twenty-eight Baltimore Protestant clergymen today urged repeal of Maryland's "Jim Crow" law.

The clergymen, representing 15 denominations, are sending a plea to the State House of Delegates tomorrow, asking it to follow the action of the Senate and approve the repealer.

The law requires segregation of Negroes and whites on intrastate railways and steamboats.

The repealer has been introduced several times in the Legislature and frequently has been passed by the Senate only to be killed in the House.

The statement, which the clergymen said they signed as individuals, said in part: "Two out of every three people in this world are colored," the statement continues. "If we in a free society, arbitrarily, legally segregate people solely on a basis of their color, we automatically forfeit our moral leadership and democratic statesmanship."

1948 Realty Loans Put at 11 Billions, Up 2 Per Cent

By The Associated Press

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board estimated yesterday that non-farm real estate financing in the United States totalled $11,600,000,000 last year.

The total was two per cent over 1947 when the figures first were compiled.

The board said lending activity dropped off the last four months below the 1947 figures after running ahead the first eight months.

The mortgages involved are limited to $20,000 or less and thus largely reflect loans to finance homes. The average loan recorded last year amounted to $4641, or $129 more than for 1947.

The board's report, issued by Chairman William K. Divers, said mutual savings banks and insurance companies increased their lending activity last year by 25 per cent and 21 per cent, respectively.

Striker Accused In Texas City Beating

Texas City, Tex., Feb. 20 (AP).—An assault to murder charge was filed in Galveston today against a striking Carbide and Carbon Chemical Corp. worker following a flurry of fist fights yesterday.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of Calvin R. Wheeler on the assault charge. The charge involves Thomas J. Downs, Galveston, who said he was beaten by a group of men as he left the strike-bound plant yesterday.

Trucks Sent to Evacuate Stricken Indian School

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 20 (AP).—Three United States Army ambulances and six trucks are on the way to Navajo Mountain School near the Arizona-Utah border to remove 27 seriously ill children.

Nature of the infection was unknown. It has afflicted half the children at the school and three of the six staff members.

Kite Wire Kills Boy

Burgaw, N. C., Feb. 20 (AP).—Edward McLelland, 16, flew his kite today with a thin piece of wire. It touched a high-tension power line and electrocuted him.

Surry County Equalization Meeting Called

Richmond, Va., Feb. 20 (AP).—Attorneys for the Negro plaintiffs in the Surry County school equalization case will meet with the league of Surry County Monday night.

Purpose of the meeting will be to determine what new moves, if any, will be taken in the suit against the county school board and superintendent.

Announcement of the session came from A. W. E. Bassette, jr., of Hampton, chief member of counsel for the school patrons who brought suit in Federal district court to force Surry school officials to put Negro and white public schools on an equal basis.

Bassette described the league as an organization of Negro citizens of Surry County, and said they were "the sponsorors" of the action.

The main subject of discussion, Bassette indicated, will be a second report filed Thursday by the county school board and Superintendent M. B. Joyner on the progress made in carrying out a court consent order to equalize school facilities.

If the latest report doesn't satify the league, Bassette said, a new list of exceptions will be filed—as was done following the first report. Judge Hutcheson then may be asked to order the school officials to show cause why they should not be found in contempt of court for failure to obey the judge's original edict, Bassette added.

Boy, 3, Spurns New Bike, Then Reveals Leg Break

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20 (AP).—Ronald Crawford, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crawford, looked fondly at his new bike yesterday—but said he didn't want to take a ride.

Ronald started to cry and told his mother his right leg hurt.

She took one look—and then took Ronald to the hospital. It developed he had broken the leg Friday when it caught in the spokes of the bike. He told his mother he didn't want to worry her, so hadn't said a word until the pain became unbearable.

Greek Red Paparigas Hangs Self in Cell

Athens, Greece, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Security police said tonight that Dimitrios Paparigas, former member of the Political Bureau hanged himself in his prison cell today.

Paparigas, a close friend of Greek Communist leader Gen. Markos Vafiades, was arrested in 1947 for Communist activities. He escaped from Okaria Island and returned to Athens to direct underground activities. He was arrested again last July and was awaiting trial before a military court.

Veterans Increase On Federal Payroll

The number of veterans working for the Government increased during 1948, and now amount to 46 per cent of all Government workers, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

Veterans in Government service increased by nearly 90,000 to a total of 865,000 as of January 1, 1949. The number of disabled veterans on the Federal payroll went up more than 18,000 to 113,700 at the beginning of 1949

4 School Boy Radio Contest Winners Here

Four high school boys, who spoke for democracy better than anyone else in a recent Voice of America broadcast-script contest, came here last night to reap their rewards.

The boys, whose five-minute transcriptions on the subject "I Speak for Democracy" were culled from more than 250,000 entries, are Richard Caves, 17, Everett, Ohio; Charles Kuralt, 14, Charlotte, N. C.; George Morgan, jr., 15, Hutchinson, Kans.; and Kerron Johnson, 17, St. Paul, Minn.

Their scripts, each in its own fashion, stated the case for the American way of life.

Scripts on Democracy

Caves, the president of the senior class at Bath High School, saw democracy as a way of life where "one man's defects are canceled by another man's virtues, while totalitarianism magnifies one man's faults a million times over."

Only under democracy can men find their hopes fulfilled, whether those hopes mean speaking and criticizing without fear, or owning a piece of land, said Johnson in his script.

Morgan, a sophomore at Hutchinson High School, who intends to study for the ministry, sees it this way: "A just balance between privileges and obligations form the rock-like core that can and will keep our America great in this uncertain world."

Kuralt, the youngest of the quartet, finds that democracy is "a living thing, a human thing comprised of muscles and heart and soul. I speak of democracy, and men who are free and yearn to be free speak with me."

Scripts to be Aired

Their winning scripts scheduled to be broadcast by the Voice of America, the boys are all set for a week of celebration in the Capital.

An interview with President Truman at 11:30 this morning starts the week off. This afternoon the boys will go to the Capitol to see Congress in session.

Tuesday is listed for sightseeing, including a Washington's Birthday pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. On Wednesday, Attorney General Tom Clark will present each of the boys with a $500 scholarship check during a luncheon at the Hotel Statler.

The prize money was contributed by the National Association of Broadcasters, the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the Radio Manufacturers Association, joint sponsors of the contest.

Thursday and Friday will find the boys finishing up their visit with a tour of Williamsburg, Va.

Trade Formula Plan Proposed

By The Associated Press

Senator George (D., Ga.) held out an olive branch to Republican and business critics with a proposal yesterday that Congress rewrite the trade agreements formula in the next two years.

George told reporters he will push for speedy Senate action on a House-approved bil restoring the relatively free authority of the President to revise tariffs in reciprocal treaties with other nations.

But he proposed that thereafter Congress rewrite the law to set certain standards for tariff changes "so that business will know what to expect in the future."

"We have been voting one-year extensions of the law and there hasn't been time for Congress to make any real study of changes that may be needed," The Georgia Senator said.

"If we extend it for two years from next June 12, as proposed, then there will be time to sit down and give real consideration to altering some features of the act."

George's proposal came as the Senate Finance Committee, which he heads, prepared to act finally on the House-approved measure by mid-week. It thus may be one of the first major segments of President Truman's legislative program to reach the Senate floor.

U. S. Aims to Bring Cost-of-Living Index Up to Date

By the United Press

The Government plans to overhaul its cost-of-living index to reflect more accurately the postwar buying habits of wage-earners, Federal officials revealed yesterday.

Some major labor contracts, such as the General Motors-Auto Workers Union agreement, are tied to the index. If prices go up the workers get a wage increase. If they go down they get a cut.

The Department of Labor is due to issue the index for January next week. It is expected to show another drop for the fourth straight month and to result in a 2-to-3-cent-an-hour wage slash for 350,000 General Motors employes.

The index is now based on 1934-36 buying and does not include prices of such items as frozen foods, cost and operation of mechanical refrigerators, and other technological changes in eating, clothing and living habits of the past 15 years.

Unions claim the index thus understates the cost of living.

8 Found Dead in Crash Of DC-3 in Andes

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The United States Embassy announced today that a rescue party had reached the wreckage of an American Air Force DC-3 which crashed, in the eastern Andes and found all eight aboard were dead.

The plane crashed Thursday on a flight from Panama to Buenos Aires.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Awning Company Raises A Moot Question

A local awning company advertises that its awnings will outlast the houses on which they're installed.

Karen Kruse of 2405 Ridge Road dr., Alexandria, Va., is trying to figure out whether this is a plug for the awnings or a slam for modern construction methods.

WHY DON'T THEY?

Why don't they permit visitors to see the city at night from the Washington Monument, instead of closing it up at 5 o'clock each afternoon? (Suggested by James Ames of 221 Mississippi ave. se.).

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

SECOND CHILDHOOD?

A California man is growing a new set of teeth at the age of 94.

MISCELLANY

Mrs. R. H. South of Route 1, Hagerstown, Md., wants to know what's stunting the growth of Winnie Winkle's kids. Mrs. South's son was born on the same day Winnie had her twins, and Master South is now in the second grade . . . Robert N. Nash says the reason we've never been able to master our starling problem is that we never went about the job right—we've got to find out where they nest, and destroy the eggs . . . Here's another batch of invalid streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital (don't we have them all yet?) from Cornelia Jane Little of 2831 15th st. nw. . . . H. A. Willard 2d, of 1416 F st. nw., confides that after years of being pushed and pummeled on Capital Transit vehicles, it's a pleasure to have the burden eased through the provision of a musical accompaniment . . . Rose Mary Fenwick of 937 Bonifant st., Silver Spring, Md., chides me gently for this paper's recent reference to a document "taken from the body of an American officer on June 7, 1949, the day after the invasion" . . . Gilbert Newman of 3425 A st. se., is partial to the spelling of "Frida" in an ad . . . And Gene Dant of 614 6th st. ne., wonders about our reference to the Navy's big new plane and it's "pet-assisted takeoff" . . . If war comes and the Navy runs short of pets, the District Line will probably be commandeered.

THESE CHANGING TIMES

John T. Cheney of the Public Library recalled the other day that when he first came to Washington, many years ago, Woodward & Lothrop curtained their display windows on Sundays.

Fortune Magazine once stated that W & L was the only store in the United States which still followed that practice.

But now, John notes, the curtains are no longer drawn on Sunday. And he wonders what has happened to this old custom.

The answer is that it has been abandoned, like so many other old customs. A spokesman for the store says that Sunday window displays have been visible since November of 1947.

HE'LL DO

From M. J. of 2335 Huidekoper pl. nw., comes a report about the driver of an Ivy City bus.

At Tunlaw and 37th sts., an excited woman got on the bus and pointed to a man across the street who was struggling with a half dozen suitcases.

"That was one transportation delay that no passenger resented," reports M. J.

Capital Transit lists the driver as Kenneth Armacost of 718 K st. ne., who gives every indication of developing into a permanent employe. On April 13, he'll complete 20 years of service.

EXPLANATION

Since you don't like my soft candlelight
I will tell you why I like lights low:
It's because they're a good camouflage
So the dirt in the corners won't show.

Leonard Lyons . . .

PIETRO DI DONATO, author of "Christ in Concrete," at last has found contentment. His book became a sensation, but the ensuant fame brought confusion to the young bricklayer. He spent the war years as a conscientious objector. "Maybe I was wrong," he confided at Sardi's. "Maybe I should've gone in" . . . He is married and has two sons and recently sold the movie rights to "Christ in Concrete," but uneasiness still beset him. He went to a cabin he calls "Conscience Point," where he finally came to a decision. Di Donato returned to Huntington, Long Island, and became a bricklayer again. "My neighbors think I'm just a rich guy doing this for exercise," he said "But I'm happy at last working, and I sleep well at nights."

When John Golden started his production of "They Knew What They Wanted," in which Paul Muni gives one of the season's memorable performances, he hired a costume director with whose work he became disssatisfied. During the Philadelphia tryout Carol Stone's dresses seemed unsuitable. Mrs. Muni volunteered to help and Golden consented. She found costumes which were so eminently satisfactory that Mr. Golden decided to give her program-billing. The program therefore lists "Miss Stone's Costumes by Alle Belkniff, Inc." Alle Belkniff is Mrs. Muni's name, Bella Finkel, spelled backwards.

Jacob Malik, who succeeded Andrei Gromyko as the Soviet delegate to the United Nations, is as uncommunicative as his predecessor. He consented to give his first exclusive interview to Nancy McLennan, for the U. N. World. The newspaperwoman met with Malik, and devoted the first hour to finding out where he was born and raised. She never did find out, from Malik . . . She later learned of his origin by examining the Soviet Diplomatic Dictionary, and there it was, duly listed for all to see.

During the war the American Institute of Arts and Letters elected several honorary associates, including George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Shaw has been listed as an honorary associate ever since. But now, six years later, the institute suddenly realized that Mr. Shaw never had acknowledged this designation, and so a cable was sent to him asking if he would accept. By return cable, Shaw accepted . . . Konrad Bercovici is writing a play.

BARNABY

Does Gus really have a frog in his throat?
Hmmm—a type of anurous amphibia—clearly of the Ranidae family—
Could it be that I have finally isolated the Rana vulgaris trachea, or the common frog-in-throat?
I must keep a close watch on this elusive creature, and study its habits—
A fluoroscope. That's what we need now.
The hospital doesn't have a fluoroscope, Dr. O'Malley.
No fluoroscope? IMPOSSIBLE!

Benzedrine Dope Craze Hits Jails

By Drew Pearson

What appears to be a harmless medicant for clogged-up noses has started a new dope craze that is creeping across the country. The dope is found in ordinary benzedrine inhalers — available for a few cents at most drugstores.

Grant

Not only are inmates taking dope from inhalers smuggled into the prisons, according to a prison survey, but the practice is spreading on the outside, particularly among young people. It was first brought to light by Alabama's Congressman George Grant, who stumbled onto the shocking use of benzedrine inhalers at Kilby Prison, Montgomery, Ala.

In spite of rigid regulations to keep benzedrine inhalers out of the prison, Congressman Grant interviewed prisoners whose skin had turned yellow from using the drug, and who were able to get benzedrine-treated paper torn out of the inhalers and smuggled in to them. One sharpshooting spitball sniper had even flipped the paper wads into the closely guarded death cell.

In most cases the benzedrine-saturated paper was soaked in water, then the mixture was injected into the blood stream with a hypodermic needle, the Congressman said. When the prisoners couldn't borrow or steal a hypodermic needle from the dispensary, they sometimes stuffed bits of benzedrine paper into razor slashes on their arms.

Practice Spreading

A subsequent survey by Congressman Grant showed that taking dope from benzedrine inhalers started during the war in disciplinary barracks. After the war the practice spread to civilian penal institutions.

Results of Grant's survey have not been made public, but here is a cross-section of replies from prisons.

Warden R. P. Balknew, Georgia State Prison—Benzedrine has caused us more trouble within this prison than any other form of contraband. We have had several lose their minds completely by the use of this drug.

Superintendent L. F. Chapman, Florida State Prison—In recent years the use by prisoners of these inhalers has been a major curse. The ease with which they can be purchased in any drugstore makes the effort to keep the inhalers out of prison most difficult.

Superintendent O. M. Smith, Washington State Penitentiary—We, like every other penal institution in the country, are having a difficult time controlling traffic in this harmful and habit-forming drug. It is definitely established here that the use of benzedrine contributes to the development of perverted practices. The use of benzedrine as a stimulant by thousands of persons not confined in institutions is also becoming a growing national menace. It is a well-known fact that many college students use the drug as a stimulant during periods of examination. It is further established that many persons in the entertainment world, who are required to be awake and vivacious during all hours of the night, have become addicted to the use of benzedrine.

Warden W. E. Snyder, Sing Sing Prison—Regulations prohibit benzedrine inhalers but recently some inmates procured some through improper channels.

Dr. B. L. Steward, Arizona State Prison—I feel that if benzedrine inhalers were put on the prescription list 98 per cent of our trouble with inmates would be eliminated.

Warden E. T. Senson, Maryland State Penitentiary—While the use of benzedrine inhalers has been prevalent for a number of years it appears, since the war, their use through ingestion by chewing the contents of the inhalers or soaking them in hot water and coffee has become very prevalent by alcoholics and others seeking to effect a cheap drunk. It is more noticeable among former servicemen at this time but is rapidly spreading among other people. Sincere druggists recognize this evil and some of them will not stock this medicant.

Small, Easy to Carry

These inhalers are small and easy to carry in to the inmates, and it is not too difficult for them to hide them. We have been fortunate enough to catch a couple of dishonest employes who have brought these inhalers in to inmates but it is a constant source of trouble in an institution of this type.

Warden George Alexander, Oregon State Penitentiary—Most of the benzedrine which is brought here is purchased by guards and turned over to inmates or sold to them.

Superintendent Ray Ryan, Washington State Reformatory—Have had considerable trouble in the past with benzedrine inhalers being smuggled into this institution by officers on our staff.

Warden W. E. Miller, Wyoming State Penitentiary—We had considerable trouble with guards smuggling benzedrine into the cell house before the guilty ones were apprehended and dismissed. Since then, we have had some trouble with relatives and friends sending it in, buried in peanut butter or some other foods.

Number 4 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News

VIRGINIA LEWIS BOHRER is one of those rare individuals . . . a native of Washington. After an illustrious 10-year career with the Telephone Co., Virginia thought she would retire to the duties of a housewife, but the lure of the switchboard brought her to The Hecht Co. Virginia is now completing her 10th year as supervisor of The Hecht Co.'s telephone exchange. "Telephone work in a big store is fascinating," says Virginia, "it's one sure way of keeping your finger on the pulse of an entire community."

SAYS VIRGINIA LEWIS BOHRER, SUPERVISOR OF THE HECHT CO. TELEPHONE EXCHANGE

A customer in Alexandria dials a number! An amber light flashes! In a matter of seconds that customer 12 miles away has made a purchase. Yes, it's one of the miracles of modern science . . . but more than that, it's people serving people. And whether the call is for a new Spring dress . . . or an inquiry about baby pants in size 6 months . . . or one of our buyers calling California for a rush order . . . a plug in our board is a plug for you. It's the connecting link that erases the distance between Alexandria and Washington . . . Washington and Silver Spring . . . yes, even Washington and Paris. It's 10,000 calls a day . . . over 3,000,000 calls a year to bring The Hecht Co. right into your own living room. The mechanical equipment necessary for this vast amount of telephonic communication is the largest switchboard in the Nation's Capital (with the exception of the Government and The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.) Its wires run underneath the city's streets in miles and miles of cable networks to Silver Spring . . . to our New York Avenue and G Street service buildings. The switchboard is so large it can serve the phone needs of many a town in the U.S.A. . . . it is capable of handling over 4,500 calls of 2 minute duration every hour. But the switchboard is only part of our telephone exchange story. In addition there is a dial room, a "super-human," self-operating unit with gadgets like selector switches and line finders having over 58,200 contact points. Inter-store dial calls go thru here . . . in that unbelievable split second of time that the experts tell us an electrical impulse encircles the globe. Our corps of PBX operators work in a carpeted, air-conditioned room. And right next to this room is a comfortable, restful lounge where the girls relax during their rest periods. It's sound-proof and complete with radio, sofas, easy chairs and a goodly supply of current magazines. When next you dial NAtional 5100 and hear the dulcet voice of one of our operators say "The Hecht Co.," you can be certain there's a plug in our board . . . for you.
